The Apparel Industry and Greater Miami's Industrial Future

At a time when thoughtful citizens, businessmen, and county and municipal officials all appear united in their efforts to attract, hold, and encourage desirable light industry within this area, it is especially disturbing to note the lack of recognition which is currently being afforded to our apparel industry. Its current significance, the economic factors responsible for its geographic concentration in this area, and its current and future needs, appear somehow to have escaped recognition in their true proportions.
