IT WAS OFFICIAL: President Mark Rosenberg addresses the audience at his installation ceremony Aug. 27 after accepting the oath of office.

Rosenberg, FIU to graduate thousands

CHRISTOPHER NECUZE
Editor in Chief

President Mark Rosenberg will preside over six commencement ceremonies scheduled for Dec. 14 and 15 where more than 5,500 students will receive their degrees.

This will mark Rosenberg's first commencement ceremony since becoming the University's fifth president in August, following the 23-year tenure of former president Modesto A. Maidique.

"Commencement is my favorite event of the year because of the energy our students and their families radiate," said Rosenberg in an interview with news.fiu.edu. "Our community's future is tied to the success of our graduates. They're well prepared for the challenges ahead."

Prior to becoming president, Rosenberg served as the chancellor of the Florida Board of Governors, the governing body that oversees Florida's 11 public universities.

Rosenberg also served as the University's highest academic official, provost, for eight years prior to taking up post on the BOG.

Rosenberg was selected as president after an exhaustive national search by the University's Board of Trustees after Maidique announced in Fall 2008 that he would be stepping down as president.

We are here by the efforts of many

Think of those who made graduation possible as you walk across that stage

One day in Nicaragua, my older brother, who was just five years old at the time, told my mother his class practiced military drills during physical education.

My mother was scared to death and could not bear the thought of my brother holding an assault fire to help the Sandinista communist movement of the 1980s. My uncle had been nearly beaten to death a few years past for serving as a guard for the Sandinistas. To this day, the pistol whip he received on his head impairs his hearing.

My mom could not take the same risk with her son.

COMMENTARY

SERGIO BONILLA

A few months later, she was six months pregnant climbing walls to cross the border from Mexico to California. My family moved to America with no jobs, no grasp of the English language and a newborn, myself, on the way.

Now 23 years later, my brother who was a few propaganda ads and brainwashing youth groups away from becoming a mercenary, graduated from Miller Medical School and is currently doing his residency in anesthesiology.

And the kid who my mom was pregnant with while crossing the border has just graduated from Florida International University.

I've heard my family's story of struggling in the United States, and how my parents wanted nothing more than to educate my brother and me. Even so, I still cannot believe the number of sacrifices my parents have made for us to earn college degrees. I cried nearly everyday of kindergarten.

I kicked and screamed to avoid school and even faked an asthma attack once. My parents had the patience to drag me out

TOM DANIELS CASE

Police seek new leads in missing student case

JORGE VALENS
Asst. News Director

University police are continuing the investigation in to the disappearance of College of Law Student Tom Daniels.

Campus police are "redoubling" their efforts in search of missing third-year law student, according to the University.

"During this holiday season, Tommy's family could have no better gift than to be reunited with him," said FIU Police Chief Bill King in a written statement issued by the University. "We encourage anyone with any information about him to please contact us."

Daniels was last seen on Nov. 2 in a pizzeria in West Miami-Dade County and was reported missing on Nov. 11.

FIU Police are working in unison with the Miami Beach Police Department with whom Daniels made contact on Nov. 5. At the time, Daniels was not in the missing persons database, according to the statement released by the University.

King stated that people have contacted the department to report possible sightings of Daniels and that some of his family in Miami were searching the city, trying to find him.

Daniels is a 6 ft. 5 inches tall, weighs 230 pounds and has brown hair and eyes.

Those with information regarding Daniels' whereabouts can call FIU Police at 305-348-2626 or 305-348-2633.

Houston elects first openly gay mayor

The city of Houston, Texas is the fourth major city in the United States to elect an openly gay person to its highest office.

Annise Parker was elected with 53.6 percent of the vote, beating former city attorney Gene Locke according to CNN. Parker served at the city's comptroller for 5 years. Aside from being the city's first gay mayor, Parker is the second woman to become mayor in the city's history.

Senate Democrats kill GOP bid to filibuster $1.1 trillion spending bill in rare Saturday vote

The Democratic-controlled Senate on Saturday cleared away a Republican filibuster of a huge end-of-year spending bill that rewards most federal agencies with generous budget boosts.

The $1.1 trillion measure combines much of the year's unfinished budget work — only a $626 billion Pentagon spending measure would remain — into a 1,000-plus-page spending bill that would give the Education Department, the State Department, the Department of Health and Human Services and others increases far exceeding inflation.

The 60-34 vote met the minimum threshold to end the GOP filibuster. A final vote was set for Sunday afternoon to send the measure to President Barack Obama.

Nearly 1,000 activists detained outside climate talks in Copenhagen

Tens of thousands of protesters marched through the chilly Danish capital and nearly 1,000 were detained Saturday in a mass rally to demand an ambitious global climate pact, just as talks hit a snag over rich nations' demands on China and other emerging economies.

The mostly peaceful demonstrations in Copenhagen provided the centerpiece of a day of global climate activism stretching from Europe to Asia. Police estimated their numbers at 40,000, while organizers said as many as 100,000 had joined the march from downtown Copenhagen.

Italian PM punched in face during rally

Italian Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi was assaulted at a campaign rally in Milan.

Police are questioning a man whom witnesses say punched Berlusconi in the face on Nov. 13. According to CNN, police officials have discovered that the man has a "history of mental illness".

Berlusconi, a conservative pundit turned politician, has been under intense scrutiny recently after accusations of corruption, particularly tax fraud, surfaced during his divorce.

As this chapter ends, another one begins

This past year has marked several milestones in my life: I've had triumphs in my personal life, a wonderful teaching experience, a quarter century of my life and finally, my college graduation.

Graduation.

It took a lot of emotional and physical strength to not give up and spend the money elsewhere, like on a backpacking trip throughout Europe. While I must admit I'm pleased to close this chapter, I will not soon forget the lessons I learned.

Life is a roller coaster; a journey filled with thrills and ups and downs that promise not to be dull.

And it was not easy. Whether it was finishing a report ten minutes before it was due, figuring out what to wear on an important date or crying myself out of a traffic ticket, there are many lessons to be learned and built upon for the future.

As for the future, I'm excited to see what the horizon holds; to see how I will incorporate my past experiences and young wisdom to improve my environment.

I hope to eventually continue and

U.S.-born Hispanics see gains in education

HOPE YEN
Associated Press

Young Hispanics born in the U.S. are less likely to drop out of school and live in poverty than Hispanic immigrants of their age, but they have higher exposure to gangs and violence, an independent research group says.

The study released Friday by the Pew Hispanic Center paints a mixed picture of assimilation for a fast-growing group of U.S. citizens starting to wield their political rights: more education and job advancement, but also social problems.

The survey and analysis of census data found the high school dropout rate among all Hispanic youths ages 16-24 was 17 percent, roughly three times higher than white youths and close to double the rate for black youths. But when looking only at second-generation Hispanics born in the U.S., the dropout rate falls to 8.5 percent, roughly the same as youths of all races.

U.S.-born Hispanics also had improvements in economic well-being. About 29 percent of young immigrant Hispanics lived below the poverty line, more than twice the rate for young whites in a similar age range (13 percent) and about the same as young blacks (28 percent). But among second-generation Hispanics, the figure living below the poverty line improves to 19 percent.

On the other hand, the American-born youths were twice as likely as their immigrant counterparts to have exposure to a gang or have gotten into a fight or carried a weapon in the past year. About 40 percent reported either being a gang member or knowing a friend or relative who was, compared to 17 percent for those who were foreign-born.

"It is clear that many of today's do my masters in public administration, so I can then get involved with non-profit organizations or government jobs. It will be a new, exciting path like when I first started college.

Like then, I will be taking it one day at a time.

To FIU, such a love-hate relationship, you will always have a special place in my heart. To my friends, thank you for making college and life a wonderful experience, see you at the party tonight! I have a feeling, tonight is going to be a good night.

To the graduation class of 2009, let your dreams lead your journey, we did it!

Latino youths, be they first or second generation, are straddling two worlds as they adapt to the new homeland," according to the Pew report.

The findings come as growing numbers of children and grandchildren of Hispanic immigrants are being born in this country. Currently, two-thirds of Hispanics ages 16-25 are U.S.-born citizens. Due to high birth rates, these U.S. citizens will fuel a doubling of the overall Hispanic population to 30 percent by 2050.

In electoral terms, Latinos have had less clout at the polls than their numbers would suggest.

"Their share of the electorate has not grown nearly as much as their share of the population," said Paul Taylor, director of the Pew Hispanic Center. "Now, with the coming of age of this big generation of U.S.-born children of immigrants, that's all about to change."

College was only the last item in a long list of necessary sacrifices

of the car a few times, wipe my tears right at the entrance of the school and, when I was lucky, actually let me stay home once or twice.

It's taken me years to understand why they were so adamant about me earning my education. But as I end my undergraduate career, I know the sacrifices my parents made to get me in a cap and gown are what drove our family to succeed in this country. When I receive my diploma, my name along with my major will be written on it. It will probably have a nice blue folder to keep it from being wrinkled.

But several things that helped me won't be written on the diploma. My parents' working two jobs for minimum wage and little respect will not be mentioned on the diploma.

My mother helping me learn vocabulary words after working 10 hours on her feet won't be written. My dad taking me to the library to help me improve my reading skills after he got out of work at midnight the day before will not appear. My parents' never losing hope in me and believing I could earn the same education as any other family will not be shown on the diploma either.

All these sacrifices will never leave my thoughts though.

As I venture into a job market in the midst of a recession and plagued by hiring freezes, I will look to those sacrifices for motivation. Nothing we earned in the U.S. was gained easily or without experiencing some type of pain. The struggles I face ahead pale in comparison to what my parents faced 23 years ago. And because of what I've been taught in school and by my family, I cannot accept giving up.

And no one graduating today should even contemplate giving up. Everyone has their own story, but everyone graduating at the U.S. Century Bank Arena today made it to the stage with help from someone. Think about those people when you move on to the next chapter of your life, and remember those people if you even think about holding off on your dreams.

added that the drivers of the second car were treated for injuries and released from a local hospital.

"Jorge's death is for all of us a hard reminder of what most matters in life," said college of law dean R. Alexander Acosta in an email to law students. "These emails are always difficult to write, as words fail during these circumstances."

Acosta added that Pupo had recently completed his Evidence and Administrative Law Exams and was "taking a break with family" in the Dominican Republic.

Pupo was a member of the college's law review and the treasurer for the Phi Alpha Delta law fraternity.

"Jorge was a genuinely good-hearted soul and extremely bright. I would have loved to have seen him as a lawyer in court. He would have been one of the best," said Lisa Riddle, a second year FIU Law Student who was in Pupo's law review sub-group.

Funeral services for Pupo were held on December 12 in Coral Gables. He is survived by his wife.

Immurare
Bachelor of Fine Arts | Fall 2009

TARGET WEDNESDAY AFTER HOURS

Immurare and "Censorship in the Arts" panel December 16, 2009 / 6-9pm

Come join us for a panel discussion on "Censorship in the Arts" organized in collaboration with Phillip Church, FIU Professor and Director of The FIU Alternative Theatre and Patrick de Bokay, Director of Miami World Cinema Center. Panelists include: Phillip M. Church, Moderator; Joseph Adler, Artistic Director, GableStage; Patrick de Bokay, Executive Director, Miami World Cinema Center; Marina Pareja, FIU Theatre Dept; Michael Yawney, FIU Assistant Professor, Resident Dramaturg. The evening will also include the opening of Immurare, FIU's Bachelor of Fine Arts student exhibition for fall 2009.

Gelek Rimpoche Lecture and Tibetan Mandala Closing Ceremony January 6, 2010 / 6-9pm

Venerable Gelek Rimpoche, author and personal friend of the Dalai Lama, will present a lecture entitled "Engaging Wisdom and Compassion." Mentored by some of Tibet's greatest Buddhist masters, he is among the last generation of Tibetan Lamas fully trained in 'Old Tibet', pre-1959. Also this evening, the Monks of the Drepung Loseling Monastery on tour with the Mystical Arts of Tibet will deconstruct the Tibetan Mandala during a special closing ceremony.

IF YOU ARE LOOKING FOR OPPORTUNITIES, WE HAVE OVER 100,000 MILES OF COASTLINE TO FIND THEM.

You've always known that you were born ready. You take the lead. You go full throttle. You seek out challenges and overcome obstacles. The U.S. Coast Guard is made up of leaders like you. We don't ride wakes, we leave them. If you're ready to get two years' free tuition, medical benefits and a monthly salary of around $2,200, then you might be one of us. Jump in. Visit gocoastguard.com.

Text "Ready" to 36638 and download the mobile Coast Guard game.*
