

University accreditation reaffirmed another ten years

GABRIEL ARRARÁS
News Director

The Southern Association of Colleges and Schools has reaffirmed the University's accreditation for another ten years during their Dec. 6 Board of Trustees meeting.

"This decision represents the culmination of several years of planning and documentation for our Compliance Certification Report, Quality Enhancement Plan and March 2010 site visit," said University Provost and Executive Vice President Douglas Wartzok in a letter to the University community.

Members of SACS visited the University campuses back in March as part of the University's reaccreditation bid.

The SACS on-site committee provided an analysis of all the principles of accreditation and found the University in compliance with 89 out of 90 principles.

According to Wartzok, the reaffirmation came with "no reservations and no follow-up requirements."

"It was a clean, complete [and] unqualified reaffirmation," said Wartzok.

The Quality Enhancement Plan, or QEP, has been one of the main drives behind the University's reaccreditation bid. According to a press release from the Office of Global Learning Initiatives, the purpose of the QEP is to "enhance FIU undergraduates' global awareness, perspective and attitude of engagement through global learning courses and co-curricular activities."

"SACS called our QEP topic a brilliant move for FIU, and by incorporating the suggestions made by the SACS on-site team, we are confident that our QEP will become a national model for global learning in higher education," said Hilary Landorf, director of the Office of Global Learning Initiatives, during an interview with Student Media in April.

According to Wartzok, the University's strong commitment to the QEP, along with ongoing assessments of student learning outcomes for each degree program contributed to the University's successful reaffirmation. The University's next SACS milestone will be the fifth year interim report, which is due in March 2016.

According to Wartzok, this report will document the progress of the QEP and the continued compliance with the SACS principles of accreditation, including a degree program assessment of student learning outcomes.

University to see 3,600 graduates during commencement

ALEXANDRA CAMEJO
Asst. News Director

"Commencement will mark the end of your time as FIU students and the first day of your lives as FIU alumni," said FIU President Mark B. Rosenberg, in a letter addressed to and commending the upcoming graduates of the fall semester.

With majors ranging from English to chemistry and interior design to Asian studies, approximately 3,600 graduates will be awarded degrees throughout six commencement ceremonies on Monday, Dec. 13 and Tuesday, Dec. 14 at the U.S. Century Bank Arena, located at Modesto Maidique Campus.

Whether they finished their studies in the fall or during the last summer term, Rosenberg acclaimed student efforts when he said, "the hallmark of a Panther is the ability to turn the impossible into the inevitable."

Several notable Worlds Ahead graduates will join the over 140,000 University alumni. Jacques Bentolila will be receiving his doctorate of education in exceptional student education, as a member of a select group in the highly competitive Urban Special Education Academic Leaders doctoral cohort.

Yarimar Rosa, the only FIU student-athlete in the school's history to receive the All-America recognition four times, will be graduating with a bachelor's in international business.

In the true spirit of being world's ahead, Michelle Ramirez, recipient of a doctorate in physical therapy, has already made an impact in underprivileged countries throughout Latin America by setting up several health care clinics in rural villages in Nicaragua and Honduras.

Nayla Mehdi is graduating this fall with a Bachelor in Music Technology from the College of Architecture and the Arts.

JESSICA MENDOZA
Staff Writer

Graduating this fall is student Nayla Mehdi, a mild-mannered senior who picked up the piano at the age of five, who since then has had her musical future paved in blue and gold.

On Tuesday, at the age of 22, she will walk down the graduation isle with a Bachelor in Music Technology from the College of Architecture and the Arts.

Originally from Lebanon, Mehdi crossed the pond from Saudi Arabia in the hopes of gaining her college education at Florida International University. After scouting different schools, Mehdi felt the warm and welcoming greetings from the faculty and staff. Impressed by the humbling visit, Mehdi made her way into the program in 2007.

In her years at the Wertheim School of Music, Mehdi experimented and heavily involved herself with several clubs like the Electro-Acoustic Recording Society. She also spent her time performing for experimental ensembles like the FIU Laptop Electronic Arts. FLEA would go on to perform and garner attention across the community. Mehdi says the club's main focus is to engage the community into a newfound style of music. Along with her peers, she would perform at several international Electro-Acoustic Music festivals such as the New West Electro-Acoustic Music Organization and the Society for Electro-Acoustic Music for the United States.

Other festivals include Sub-Tropics and the annual festival held at the FIU School of Music, FEAST. More recently, Mehdi and her ensembles played at Art Basel for the second year in a row.

Mehdi has focused her attention on gaining experience. This past year, she worked at the annual Youth Fair producing live audio for the

Ready to graduate: all objectives achieved during stay

Men are defined using different methods. In college, you are often judged according to whom people think you are.

JACQUES ROZIER

I have never been one readily available for others' acceptance though I understand the value of popularity.

I often prefer my work precede your knowledge of me since personal boasts require spontaneity and familiarity.

Speaking self-edification conflicts with the nature of a genuine southern beau. I am no philosopher, but I do define my time at FIU using four words.

Achieving is an action. It is not static. In many cases, achievement tells you when to leave.

Rugby becomes another spectator sport. The goal was to play: achieved. The realization all groups are not worth joining, in spite of their appearance.

The goal was to let them know you are here: achieved. Raise the G.P.A. Make more A's than B's while eliminating lower grades. Join Public Relations Student Society of America.

Making sure I handle my responsibility: achieved. Leadership is given, it is not declared. Reliability, consistency, trustworthiness and quality are characteristics of people in charge.

From the first semester on campus, being a formal leader was a welcome request. The high esteem my schoolmates give me honors my presence and I gladly accepted the duty. But, all leadership does not come from those in positions of power.

In some instances, I've done more work as a member than I may have as a leader. When other people tell you how hard you are working, that's a signal you are viewed as a leader.

Excellence coexists with purity, not perfection. To tell you I always made A's would be a stretch. My intent is always pure and my effort exhaustive which often displays itself with an A on the transcript, or a great recommendation letter.

There is no shame in the word "cannot;" knowing your limits helps you magnify your strengths. Stating you can't when you haven't attempted to do will always keep you behind the curve. Intention dedicates time.

Trust me, it is possible to take 12 classes in two semesters while maintaining a job and community involvement, but I wouldn't recommend it.

Success is commencement. At the point in life you can face a new beginning, your preparation meets either a proud triumph or defeat that teaches something.

There were many minor successes on the way to graduation. Logging into Panthersoft daily to ensure no surprises impede financial aid is how I often celebrated the holidays.

The future reveals no hints to the present. Preparation for the present occurred in the past. It guides the decisions but the true results may hide until long after the decision has been made.

For everything I could have been during my tenure at FIU, none make me more proud than achieving leadership, excellence and success. I take these lessons learned into the worlds ahead.

Golden Panther by chance, eventually finds his place

It's funny how fast four years blow by. I still remember begrudgingly walking on to the Biscayne Bay Campus my first year, upset that I had to come to FIU.

SERGIO MONTEALEGRE

Little did I know that I'd leave with a greater appreciation for this school and all it's done for me.

I only came to FIU because of an unfortunate mishap that stopped me from going to Florida State University after being accepted, and yet it almost feels like that this was the right move.

To all of you graduating this semester: congratulations. You survived energy drink-filled nights, myriads of papers, and likely one or two classes you didn't care for.

I'm sitting here in the middle of the Graham Center's atrium on a cold December morning with a gingerbread latte realizing that just as fast as it started, my undergrad career is over.

It's like reaching the end of a video game and seeing the credits roll.

The End. While I'm glad that I no longer have to stay up late cramming for exams or finishing up major research papers (for now), I'm getting a bit nostalgic about the place.

From exploring the muddy bottoms of the Everglades in waist-high water in Ecology of South Florida's lab to covering a hotly contested school board election as part of the Liberty City Link for the South Florida Times, I can't help but think I've done far more here than what I would have done up in Tallahassee.

I even got to see the football team clinch the Sun Belt Conference championship for the first time ever. Amazing stuff.

Particularly, the memories I'll always cherish are the ones that happened working at this very newspaper. Yeah, the stories were fun to cover and pegging a few wayward Student Government representatives from overstepping their bounds was a thrill, but the true joy came with working with the fine staff I now happily call friends.

It's from them I learned the most, even when taking into account classes. You may or may not know it, but the people that write these articles and put together this periodical easily have the biggest passion and dedication in wanting to see this paper succeed, even if it means sometimes staying on campus until 1 a.m. on a Saturday night.

Every section gave 110% but I have to give obligatory shout-outs to the boys in Sports and the lonely crew all the way in the fish tank of an office called Beacon At the Bay. News, Life!, Opinion, you're also amazing and it was a blast working with all of you.

My sister always told me that college will blast by in a blink of an eye and I always took it as her just being overly dramatic about it.

Sure enough, I blink, and here I am with my mortarboard and a crimson tassel with "Class of 2010" on it. If I could talk to my stubborn freshman self, I'd tell him to shut up and just enjoy the ride instead of griping all the time.

I know FIU will always be there for me to head back to, spin the giant cube, or watch as a flock of ducks chases down a freshman throwing pizza crusts at it, but for now, it's time to hit the road.

Destination: wherever the wind takes me.

Mehdi credits musical successes to 'unrelenting' mentor fair festivities. Mehdi has lended her talents to organizations across campus, working alongside fellow students in producing sounds from scratch for music concerts.

Although much of her collegiate years were spent experimenting with sound and audio, Mehdi admits that the one thing she will take from here is friendship.

Her mentor Paula Matthussan, a visiting professor for the School of Music, has served instrumental in molding her as a musician. Mehdi worked in Matthussan's fast-paced curriculum that allows her students to keep up with advancing technology.

Moreover, Matthussan was not just a teacher, but also a confidant. The young teacher is a successful scholar whose innovative compositions have gained national attention. Mehdi's unexpected friendship with the instructor has given her another lasting impression.

Mehdi found musical enlightenment experimenting with music after years of studying.

Mehdi credits Matthussan, not only for the impressive growth of the program, but the unrelenting push for to follow the craft as a valuable asset to her profession.

Having worked so hard over the years and having garnered so much experience, she is now ready to take the giant leap of graduating.

Future plans for Mehdi include a lot of musical experimentaton, with a particular focus on live audio engineering. She will be applying to schools like Dartmouth and New York University with a focus on expanding her musical knowledge.

"Definitely, the main focus is broadening and learning as much as I can," she says, "There's just no limit to what you can do in this industry."

The exclusive opportunities with the U.S. Coast Guard are as deep as the waters that surround our nation's coastline. To learn more and become more, jump in at gocoastguard.com/cspi or call 1-877-NOW-USCG to speak with a Coast Guard Recruiter.
