Lessons for my younger self: Life has its own plans for you

I spent much of this week writing letters to my friends, yes I still send out normal mail, to tell them how much they mean to me.

While in the middle of my stack of cards, I couldn't help but think of that Brad Paisley song, "Letter to Me" and what I would tell myself at 17-year-old.

Well first off I was starting FIU. So I would begin by reminding myself that going to this school is not the end of the world. And that all of the years I cried driving to campus in the morning and lunches I ate alone in my car wishing I had a friend to talk to, will be worth it in the end.

I would tell myself that I need to stop worrying about the future, heck my 21-year-old self needs to hear that lesson from time-to-time, because the truth is no one knows what they are doing in life. It is all a matter of who puts up the best front and who doesn't let fear control them.

I'd then tell myself, "sorry kid, you I didn't get that dream job right out of college, but get over it. You're still going to be doing what you love and working for a great newspaper." I don't think the 17-year-old me would believe the people I have met and the articles I have written.

I would tell myself to pay more attention during my first internship to an editor named Rafael Olmeda. Because one day he will end up being that one professor who inspired me and made me push myself, despite all of the red marks on my papers.

In the end, first impression of FIU was wrong. I didn't end up hating this place like I once thought I would and my time here meant more to me than I thought it would.

You'll meet some amazing friends in college who will stay up talking to you on Facebook when you're upset, text you funny comments and are always up for a warm conversation. They will show you what true friendship is about, may even become like the big brother or sister you never had. Ultimately, a lot of the ones that were super close to you in high school will just end up as Facebook news-feed updates and old tagged photos.

Sadly, there will be some that flat out break your heart and teach you a lesson in being too trusting, but that heartbreak will make you stronger.

Oh speaking of people in your life, please don't argue with mom or dad so often. What they do, they do with the best intentions, and as nice as they are most of the time, they are not to be used as an outlet to vent all your frustrations, that's what your Twitter account is for.

Be sure to not slack off and wait until the last moment to

My second choice was my best choice

My, four years goes by fast, doesn't it? I still can't believe it myself.

I've been thinking about graduating lately, particularly since I turned in my last final exam last Thursday. After I handed back my professor my blue book and left his classroom, I thought, "Am I really done?" And as I celebrated with my classmates, flabbergasted at the fact that I really had no classes left to complete, I kept doing mental double-takes.

I'm done. It's like playing a video game and you finally reached – and beat – the last level. No more bosses, no more quests.

It's over. Coming to FIU was not an easy decision for me. I remember, during my senior year of high school, how badly I wanted to go to another college out of the state. Reluctantly, since I did not have $20,000 for their tuition, I became a Golden Panther. I enrolled in SLS 1501, Freshman Experience as well as my other classes required for the University Core Curriculum.

STATE

Former Governor continues lawsuit to limit power of legislature in tuition increases

A group including former Gov. and ex-U.S. Sen. Bob Graham will continue a lawsuit challenging the Legislature's authority to set tuition at state universities, although one of its partners has withdrawn.

The Board of Governors, which oversees the 11 universities, had joined the group's lawsuit three years ago but last month reached a settlement with the Legislature to share authority over tuition and some other governance matters with lawmakers.

The suit, filed in Tallahassee, seeks a Circuit Court order declaring the board has sole authority over those functions including tuition. It's likely to work its way up to the Florida Supreme Court.

Meanwhile, the House on Friday unanimously passed a bill (HB 7237) making changes in state law needed to carry out the Legislature's end of its bargain with the board that lets lawmakers keep their leading role in setting tuition. Graham helped lead a citizen initiative that amended the Florida Constitution to create the board in 2002. The intent was to curtail political interference with the universities.

The amendment doesn't specifically mention tuition but says "the board shall operate, regulate, control and be fully responsible for the management of the whole university system."

The Legislature contends the amendment does nothing to block its constitutional authority over spending, which lawmakers say includes tuition as part of its revenue-raising powers such as taxation.

Gibson disagrees, arguing tuition falls outside the Legislature's revenue authority because it's a voluntary payment for contractual services.

University a familiar 'place to return to'

I was bored. I wasn't even in an English class, so I hadn't really started on my major yet. But I was so bitter about being at FIU that I began to look for universities to transfer to.

But then I finally got into my English classes: ENC 1102, what was then called Literary Analysis, now simply English Composition II, Approaches to Literature and Modern Drama. I quickly fell in love with my classes and the department. I stayed.

And as I took my classes, I did my best to become involved with on-campus activities. I joined The Beacon in 2007, as well as the FIU College Democrats. I was inducted into Sigma Tau Delta, the English Honor Society. Through all these groups, coupled with my classes, I made great friends I know I'll stay in touch with for the rest of my life – hopefully.

I say this because in September, I'll be leaving FIU and Miami behind for good as I pursue my master's degree in Boston, Massachusetts.

But for now, while it's not September, I look at my cap, gown and tassel tucked away into the free bag I got from Grad Send-Off. I glance over the cords, medallions and single stole I will wear on April 27, as I walk across the stage to receive my fake degree, which will remind me that yes, my real degree will be in the mail – this is still happening.

I look at the dates on the five coveted tickets I'll give to my lucky family members and mentor who will attend my commencement ceremony. In big bold letters: "SPRING 2010 COMMENCEMENT. TUESDAY, APRIL 27, 2010 @ 3:30 p.m." I think: "No. No, this isn't supposed to happen yet."

I'm supposed to find out there's a third floor in the Graham Center, discover how wonderful the Green Library is at night and learn about the myth of the Kissing Bridge by the Ryder Business Building, along with its quiet turtles underneath. Now I'm supposed to say good-bye?

While there have been many moments of excitement and celebration I'll never forget, there are memories at FIU that I have had that can be considered ordinary, uneventful or mundane. I consider these just as important, or even more important than those happy times.

They only remind me that FIU is a place to which I can return – it is there where I can find the cube I can spin, the books I can read and the faces who taught me everything I know.

But as for now: time's up. And it's time to walk.

Education before romance

do everything, you're life will be less complicated that way. Learn to play guitar, take an Italian lesson or two, study abroad, expand your limits and live outside your comfort zone.

When it comes to relationships and love; don't worry. Those things should take a backseat to education, for now at least.

Be honest and clear, learn how to say "no" sometimes. You don't always need to protect the feelings of other people. If you're hurt let them know, just don't be too blunt and let your temper fly.

If you think your life is great now, you should see it four years from now. There are so many bumps and turns along the way, you really won't know how you'll turn out.

Honestly, it's like Brad says in the song, "there are nowhere near the best years of your life."

I urge those remaining to cherish it and make the most of it. And for those walking that stage with me, leave college in the past, take the lessons learned and move forward.

Join us for The Art of Schmoozing - How to Work a Room during Target Wednesday After Hours April 28, 2010

The Art of Schmoozing - How to Work a Room

FIU students and alumni are invited to join us from 5-6pm for this presentation by the FIU Career Services Office about the do's and don'ts of networking followed by a speed networking event presented by Target.

Stay for performances by Sound Image Sound and walk-thru Crome Yellow during the rest of Target Wednesday After Hours from 6-9pm

Sound Image Sound

Sound Image Sound returns to The Frost Art Museum with a new performance. The ensemble will explore new sounds with video projection on The Frost Art Museum's exterior facade. Guest Artists include Kristine Burns, Orlando Jacinto Garcia, Eric Goldemberg, Jacek Kolasinski, Paula Matthusen, John Stuart and Daniel Viñoly, with additional performances by FLEA laptop ensemble and clarinetist Julian Santacoloma from the NODUS ensemble.

Crome Yellow, Spring 2010 BFA Student Exhibition Walk-thru

The Bachelor of Fine Arts class of Spring 2010 at FIU's School of Art & Art History, present a series of works produced during their tenure at FIU.

Target has teamed up with The Frost Art Museum to sponsor its popular programming series Target Wednesday After Hours. Designed to complement The Frost Art Museum's exhibitions, these events give visitors the chance to meet contemporary artists and engage with controversial art, live music, talks, films, dance, and performance art.
