Petition calls for Elvis Yeung to leave SGA

WENDY COBOURNE Managing Editor

SGA Consularie Rich Fatigate is taking a "last alternative" in trying to remove acting chairperson Elvis Yeung from office.

Fatigate is circulating a petition that could, if enough signatures are collected, remove Yeung from the position he has held since he was elected last quarter.

If Fatigate gets 2,858 students (onefourth of the student body) to sign the petition, Yeung will be forced quit, according to the SGA constitution.

Earlier Fatigate asked the SGA's International Court to decide whether the spring election was valid, charging himself and others with violating election guidelines.

The court refused to hear the case "soley because it would screw up the SGA and we wouldn't be able to approve the budget, which would jeopardize SGA salaries," Fatigate said he was told by court justices.

The petition does not mention the legality of the election, however. It only demands the removal of Yeung, stating that he doesn't adequately represent the students.

Fatigate, who will be graduated from FIU in August, said he is not attempting to take the chair position.

"I want to clean house, even if it includes getting rid of myself and my own salary. What I'm trying to do is make things better for the future," he said.

Fatigate said he started the petition because "I have been approached by quite a number of students who are dissatisfied with Elvis Yeung."

Loomba quit two days before vote

WENDY COBOURNE Managing Editor

Paul Loomba submitted his resignation as dean of FIU's School of Business on May 27, two days before a special meeting where more than half the business faculty secretly voted "no confidence" in him.

FIU President Gregory Wolfe, who said Loomba gave no reason for resigning, waited several days before accepting the former dean's resignation.

Wolfe, who gave Loomba credit for having "some splendid objectives," said he did not ask Loomba to resign. "I might have if he hadn't offered, but I really can't say.

"There were some pretty serious conflicts of styles and a problem of chemistry of personalities. He obviously perceived that," Wolfe said.

Loomba is returning to Baruch College in New York City, which he left to become FIU's business dean a year ago.

FIU's School of Business, meanwhile, is without a dean. Wolfe has appointed seven business faculty, headed by Faculty Council Chairperson Bill Welch, to help him find an interim dean. "I hope to do it before the end of the summer quarter," he said.

The committee has "pretty much ruled out" selecting someone from within FIU to take the temporary position, he said, and the interim dean will most likely be nominated for the permanent position.

"It will probably take two years to get the next dean in place," Wolfe said, "because a new academic vice president is about to be appointed and that person should have a chance to participate in helping the search and screen committee in the selection of a dean and in getting the school organized."

The new dean should have "an appropriate combination of administrative talent and sensitivity to personnel requirements," he added.

Loomba had been accused by business faculty members that he gave unusually large raises to some faculty members and denied raises to others; spent the school's money unwisely; practiced administrative intimidation; didn't hire enough women; and spent excessive time in New York with his family.

Loomba never publicly admitted to or denied any of the charges, but did invite an investigation.

Graham may veto four-year status bill

YOLANDA W. ULRICH Staff Writer

Everyone concerned with the recently passed Higher Education Bill is asking the question: will Governor Bob Graham veto the "good news/bad news" bill or will he sign it into law?

The Higher Education Bill, numbered Senate bill 986, is of great interest to FIU.

"If the governor signs this bill," pointed out Fausto Gomez, FIU lobbyist, "the University would receive the long overdue four-year status."

According to many persons who have followed the legislative actions regarding the State University System over the past two years, this bill contains good news and bad news.

The good news is, along with the implementation of the lower division at FIU without any merger, the University would also receive the needed funds to complete the third floor of the Tamiami Campus library and provide the funds to finish construction.

What is considered bad news is the rest of the bill. The internal make-up of the state educational system would change drastically and the moves would be expensive.

Each of Florida's public universities would have its own board of trustees. "These boards, however, would not really have any power, serving at the pleasure of the state Board of Regents," Gomez said.

The BOR would be enlarged and a new Commission of Postsecondary Education would be established. Future mergers in the university system would be studied by this commission.

Gomez noted that major newspapers all over the state, including the Miami Herald, have not endorsed this bill and are encouraging Gov. Graham to veto it.

According to Gomez, FIU's future would not necessarily be bleak in the event of a veto.

"In reality we have lost nothing," he said. "We still have the status quo and we are not involved in a merger. Four-year status, which is our major concern, is already authorized."

But the question remains unanswered: just what is Gov. Graham going to do?

According to Jill Chamberlin, deputy press secretary to Graham, her office is not sure if the bill has yet reached the governor's desk.

"It is a rather lengthy and timeconsuming process," she said. "Before the bill reaches the governor's office, many signatures and numerous filings take place.

"As for his intentions to veto or not to veto ... your guess is as good as mine."

Dunn appears on 'Today Show'

YOLANDA W. ULRICH Staff Writer

Dr. Marvin Dunn, associate vice president of University Outreach and Services and black community leader, appeared on NBC's Today Show Friday morning and talked about the racial problems Miami has experienced during the past two decades.

After viewing films depicting racial unrest in several cities during the 1960's, Dunn discussed the implications of the Miami occurances as they might relate to the domestic situation of the entire country.

Miami is not the only large city with serious racial issues, Dunn noted before leaving for New York to do the show. He said he is deeply concerned with the domestic picture and feels that "not too much will be taking place here (in Miami) in regards to drastic changes. But that seems to be the mood of the entire country."

Dunn said that the nation is swinging toward a more conservative attitude. "I just don't see people digging deep into their pockets in an attempt to solve these domestic problems."

Discounting the claim that not much has been done

since the racial conflicts twenty years ago, Dunn said that while the changes have been little ones, there have been changes nevertheless.

"Money has been spent and some strides have been made," he said. "Unfortunately, that money and those strides have not touched the people who need help the most. The ones who have masters and Ph.D.s can do okay in Miami, but those do not number a great many."

Traveling to New York for this show and other public appearances is done as a "private and concerned citizen," Dunn said, and not as a representative of FIU.

"Actually I am disappointed in FIU's reaction to the community's problems. I had hoped they would be more responsive. We should be in the thick of things...instead we are watching from the sidelines," he said.

Dunn, who in September will resign from his current position and return to the psychology department as an associate professor, will appear before a Congressional Committee Wednesday.

He will present the committee with information, attempting to furnish an insight into domestic problems and what steps can be taken to correct these situations.

So you decide to B.S. your way through and settle for a C or a D.

You don't have to do it anymore.

Just down the road from FIU, at Coral Way and 95th Ave., the new West Dade Regional library has opened after being in mothballs for nearly two years.

Big deal, you say, its probably some diddly-dung little library with a few kiddie books in it. Nothing for the serious college student.

Think again, pal. This library, with 50,000 square feet and over 150,000 volumes, is bigger than FIU's.

Built with 2.5 million dollars of Decade of Progress reading in this part of the county.

Although the building has been finished for nearly two years, getting the books to stock it has been quite a task.

But the library finally opened last Thursday and the staff eagerly awaits visitors, including FIU students and staff.

The library is open from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday and from 10 to 6 on Friday and Saturday. It's closed Sundays.

And the best news of all; it's free. To Dade County residents that is. Out-of-towners will have to pay a small Summertime and the living is easy. Heh, heh, heh.

We're back, just like we promised. June 23 and the first edition of the summer quarter International is out.

So we won't be taking it easy this summer; although we won't be working quite as hard either. This is the first of five issues of the paper coming out this summer and we

We've made a couple of changes. First, Wendy Cobourne, news editor in the spring, has assumed the duties of managing editor. And James Quigley, a former staff photographer, is now the photo editor.

Others on the staff include Pete Kolb, business manager; Yolanda Ulrich, staff writer; Onda Scheck, staff writer and Jim Carson, editor.

SGA votes itself $200,000 more in new budget

The SGA unanimously approved a budget of more than $1 million at its last regular meeting on June 11, increasing its own budget by more than $200,000.

SGA's own budget was increased from more than $200,000 last year to more than $400,000. The additional money will be used partly to sponsor more quality programs and bring more distinguished speakers to FIU, SGA Comptroller Cecil Rodriguez said, referring to the recent Beatlemania concert and a Ralph Nader lecture.

The million-dollar budget is a "500 percent increase in quality" over last year's budget, according to Rodriguez.

"We're cutting off a lot of fringe things and spending the money on things more important to the students," he said.

The new budget will require clubs to request funds from SGA twice a year, instead of the old budget's once-a-year standard.

"This should bring more pressure from students, instead of so much from the administration. The administrators are the main lobbyists now, because they are the ones who know we have the money," Rodriguez said.

A "trade-off" with Student Affairs through the budget will result with FIU's soccer and baseball coaches getting paid through SGA. A position in the housing office and the director of student retention will now be funded through Student Affairs.

"According to A&S law, we are to fund athletics, so I think this is a step in the right direction," said Rodriguez.

The SGA's budget comes from a portion of the activity and service fees each student pays.

Food drive here for riot victims gets little help

About six community psychology graduate students at FIU "got tired of the fact that nobody's doing anything" about the many hungry and jobless people in Miami, victims of the riots of a month ago, so they started a food and clothing drive at the Tamiami Campus June

One barrel of canned goods and old clothes, lots of garbage and almost two weeks later, the drive is still on. It's been extended until June 30.

"I'm pretty certain that there are a lot of people who just haven't bothered to bring anything in," said Andrea Slapion, originator of the drive.

The drive, supported by FIU President Gregory Wolfe, is sponsored by the Miami city manager's office. Anything collected at the University is given to the city manager's office, which distributes the goods to people according to established guidelines.

One barrel is on the PC building's first floor near the cashier's window. The other is outside the bookstore in the UH building.

The Bay Vista Campus is just getting into the act. Rosemund Foster, vice president of Academic Affairs, found out about the effort at the Tamiami Campus and thought Bay Vista should get involved.

People can now deposit food and clothing in the barrel in the library near the circulation desk or in room 100 in Academic I.

Register today

If you missed the May registration for summer quarter classes, you have until 7 o'clock tonight to register without paying a $25 late fee. Beginning tomorrow through June 30, a $25 late registration fee will be tacked on to the reduced tuition. Registering after June 30 will cost you an extra $50. Undergraduate tuition has been reduced to $10.50 per credit hour for state residents and to $45 per credit hour for non-residents.

Check out food

The Rathskeller and cafeteria at Tamiami and the Bay Vista snack bar reopened today under new management. Servomation replaces the former caterer, Saga. Servomation says it will lower the prices of many items. But some prices will go up. For instance, a 12 oz. bottle of Michelob Lite will jump from 65 to 95 cents.

Play opens

"Vanities," the Jack Heifner comedy about three women's struggles through cheerleading, sororities and life, will be presented free to FIU students Friday, Saturday and Sunday. All performances of the three-act play begin at 8:15 p.m. in DM 150 at the Tamiami Campus.

International music

Dr. Yoshihiro Obata, associate professor of performing arts, held a world-wide music competition that has resulted in an International Music Festival at the Tamiami Campus. Accomplished musicians from Italy, Tokyo, China, Taiwan, Canada and Miami will perform in four concerts, all in AT 100. The first three, scheduled for June 27 and 28 and July 5, will take place at 8 p.m. The fourth concert is a 3 o'clock matinee on July 6.

1,500 graduate

FIU graduated more than 1,500 students at its 17th commencement ceremony on June 15 at the Miami Beach Convention Center. President Gregory Wolfe was honored at the occasion with a sterling silver chain of office, designed and created by assistant professor Clem Pennington and elementary school art teacher Leo Scherker. The 48 inch-long chain had 10 oval medallions and an oval pendant which displayed a stylized map of the world.

Scholarship winner

Lynn Grice, a Hospitality Management student with a 4.0 grade point average, was the first woman to win the Arthur J. Packard Memorial Scholarship. In addition to the $2,500 scholarship, Grice will receive an all-expense paid trip to the American Hotel and Motel Association national convention in Washington, D.C., this December.

Art exhibit

The Visual Arts Gallery at the Tamiami Campus will host a preview reception of original artworks by four students on July 11 from 8 to 10 p.m. Olga Conejo will display paintings; Gail Rohrmann, black and white photographs; Gerard Ortega, concrete and reinforced steel structures; and Roy Wiemann, airbrush paintings. The students are exhibiting their portfolios as part of the requirements toward a Bachelor of Fine Arts Degree.

The exhibition, which is largely funded by the SGA, will continue through July 18. The gallery, in PC 112, is open Monday through Friday.

FIU - DEPT. OF CONFERENCES WILL PRESENT A COMPREHENSIVE SPEED READING PROGRAM

You Will Read 3-10 Times Faster

Reading Development, a speed reading course, will be offered on the FIU Tamiami and North Campus. Through Reading Development literally thousands of students have learned to read 3 to 10 times faster in their textbooks.

Students taking the course at FIU last quarter reported increases of up to 10 times with comprehension. Improvement to 3, 4 or 5,000 words per minute is not uncommon and three students have actually learned to read 12,000 words per minute with excellent comprehension!

No Extra Reading. You Learn While Studying Your Own Text.

Unlike most speed reading courses, there is no additional reading required-you will learn to read faster in your own books. Reading Development does not use any so-called "standardized" readings. ANYTHING you can read now, you can learn to read 3-10 times faster. Bring your own choice of books to each class.

The Reading Development course includes a lesson on how to study efficiently, information all students can

In a year when the athletic situation at FIU was unsettled, to say the least, the success of the University's athletic teams was

Editor

With the exit of Tom Wonderling in the fall, FIU lost the only athletic director and baseball coach it had ever had.

Under his guidance, FIU's athletic program was one of the top-ten in the nation in Division II. His baseball teams were perennial winners.

Wonderling left behind a strong program, but one that would have a new athletic director and baseball coach and one that had several first-year coaches.

Women's tennis Coach Nancy Olson stepped in as the acting athletic director and assistant Coach Danny Price took the reigns of the baseball team.

And FIU enjoyed its most successful year in athletics.

Six out of the University's 10 athletic teams finished in the top-ten nationally. Seven athletes made All-American and two teams finished in the top-four. Only two teams had losing records.

The seven All-Americans this year were more than FIU had in its history (six).

Price and the baseball team were probably the most amazing. The obstacles they overcame made their fourth-place finish in the Division II College World Series a tremendous achievement.

At one time in the season, the team was on the verge of bankruptcy and having its season cancelled. Somehow, the money was found to complete the season.

Then, after compiling a 37-12 regularseason record, it had to sweat out a postseason playoff bid. It got one, the last of three remaining in the nation and it took full Price and his troops swept the South Atlantic Regional in Valdosta, Ga. in three straight games and headed for the national tournament in California.

There, the team won its first game but dropped the next two and settled for fourth place. Ironically, one of the schools FIU lost to was eventual champion Cal-Poly Pamona.

It was the first regional championship for FIU and the first trip to the College World Series. And it was Price's first year as

Olson should get AD position

The success of an organization mirrors its leader and often, the leader should be rewarded.

We can think of no better way to reward Acting Athletic Director Nancy Olson than to see her appointed as the permanent AD.

Under her guidance, FIU's athletic program enjoyed its most successful year. She has displayed many of the qualities a good AD should have.

Sure she is inexperienced. But how can she get experience if she isn't given a chance to do the job?

The athletic director search and screen committee probably will not make is recommendation until late August or early September.

It would be much too late to have an outsider take over the job then. The athletic year would be well under way.

Someone from within is needed. And that someone should be Nancy Olson.

She is working on her master's in sports administration now. Let's hope FIU doesn't let her studies go unnoticed.

When the time comes to decide, Nancy Olson should get the job.

Support of petition can eliminate Yeung

There's a petition being circulated right now and we urge everyone to sign it.

It calls for the ouster of Elvis Yeung. Yeung, acting SGA Chairperson, doesn't deserve to be in office.

He is a proven liar, convicted law breaker and judging by his academic record, an unintelligent individual.

According to the SGA constitution, a petition signed by one quarter of the student body can remove an SGA officer.

Rich Fatigate, the SGA Consularie who is circulating the petitions, figures this is the last chance to remove Yeung from office. He's tried everything else.

Help the guy out. Help yourselves out. And most importantly, help FIU out.

Show the enthusiasm you showed in support of the Beatlemania concert. The SGA did somthing for you, now let's see you do something for the SGA.

As long as Elvis Yeung is in office, the SGA is in trouble. Let's get Yeung out of office.

Sign the petition.

It was the first concert of its kind tried here and we think it was a smashing success.

Thanks, SGA. Let's try it again sometime.

Getting stronger every issue

The staff of The International tries to improve the paper every time it comes out.

We feel that with the installation of regular circulation during the summer quarter, the paper has taken a giant step in its growth.

We are now a year-round paper with what we hope is year-round readership.

In the past, The International has circulated in the summer, but to a much less degree than what we are doing now.

It must be taken into consideration that during the summer quarter, there are fewer students attending class and fewer people on campus.

Consequently, advertisers are more hesitant to buy space and in turn we can't provide as much

But we are taking a chance anyway because we feel it is of great importance that The International come out during the summer. A college newspaper can be a source of pride for its student body and faculty and we want very much for FIU to be proud

We feel we have an obligation to the university community and we can only hope we can fulfill that obligation this summer.

We will be coming out every other week with an eight-page paper. Our usual readers are accustomed to seeing 12 pages every week, but be aware of the circumstances we are publishing under.

We get no financial support from the Unversity and we ask for none. The University does, however, have the chance to buy advertising in the paper. But sadly, many departments that have advertised in the past don't anymore. Instead, we see their ads in The Miami Herald or Miami News.

In these times of inflation, businesses very often crumble. The International is not a business, but we are still hostage to the economy.

So we may lose money this summer, in fact we expect to. But we feel our obligation to the FIU community is such that it necessitates our publishing

Yes, we may lose money, but we'll be here next fall and next summer — as long as the FIU communi-

If you would like to contribute to The International, feel free to send us letters or stories. Letters should be no longer than one typewritten or two handwritten pages. We will consider printing longer letters, should the content warrant the space. All letters must be signed. However, we will withhold your name upon request. Letters may be edited for space and obvious error.

Logic is at question

To the Editor:

In a reply to the letter by Charles Jones and me, Dr. Patricia H. Lutterbie, executive director, Office of the President, asserted that we engaged in logical fallacies (adhominen assaults and emotive terms) as opposed to relying on facts with respect to the Outreach transfers and Dr. Marvin Dunn's ensuing resignation.

Fortunately, I, too, have taken Logic 101 and happen to know what specious reasoning and begging the question mean.

Dr. Lutterbie presented what she purports to be facts justifying these transfers. Let us analyze these "facts."

She cited a Task Force recommendation stating that, "Institutes and Centers which have as their primary focus goals consistent with the particular academic units should be based in the appropriate School or College."

I am in basic agreement with said recommendation. Even though interdisciplinary approaches have been extrememly useful in most human endeavors, and particularly so in Education, I do not dispute that the aforementioned recommendation is sound. But to use such a recommendation as a basis for justifying these transfers is both sophomoric and sophistic. The issue has never been that the School of Education should not have community education, but how these programs are to be obtained.

If these programs were needed, why did the School of Education fail to develop them? If others developed them, why should they be taken from them? That it had but meager grant funding in the past, the School of Educationn should blame no one but itself. I am highly gratified that it is now developing new programs. It is about time, for they are sorely needed. I am outraged, however, that well-functioning programs that have been created, developed and nurtured by others are being taken over by the School of Education. Let it develop its own programs, as it is now doing and let it earn the privilege of serving the community.

To recapitulate, it is simply ludicrous to argue that the Task Force's recommendation justifies these transfers. It does no such thing. How Dr. Lutterbie or anyone else can construe that is beyond me.

Dr. Lutterbie emphasizes that this policy (transfers) is the result of much thought, discussion, and research on this issue; that it was supported by academic logic (whatever that means!), and was recommended by the Vice President and approved by the President. I am unimpressed.

While agreeing that such is a rational process which may serve to generate good decisions, I submit that such a process may also generate poor decisions, countless examples of which abound in all fields. Among other factors, the quantity and quality of the data and the orientation and motivation of those who collect and interpret them critically affect the outcome. Thus, there is no assurance whatsoever that this process ensures correct, wise, ethical, equitable and fair decisions. It most certainly has not in this case.

Dr. Lutterbie stated in her letter that, "It is our understanding that the professionals from Outreach who are transferring to the School of Education seem pleased about the move." She conveniently forgot to mention that the Program Directors and staff members, individually and collectively, without exception, were strongly opposed to the transfers, and made their opposition known to President Wolfe in no uncertain terms.

In these times of high unemployment, high inflation, and deepening recession, there has been little choice but to accept a fait accompli. And while it may be fairly said that some of those transferred may indeed be pleased about the move, it should also be noted that some of those transferred are not at all pleased. So, please, let us "tell it like it

Statement reflects FIU's racism

To the editor:

Dear Dr. Wolfe:

I take issue with your statement in The International of June 4, 1980, which states that "our entry standards are higher than those of a community college and some blacks cannot meet those standards."

Currently, I am involved in the community and with the standards here and in many instances foreign as well as local students have left here to go to Barry College or the University of Miami because of racist attitudes on the part of professors and administrators.

Furthermore, I have tried to encourage students to come here because of the proximity to home and low cost of tuition; however, time and time again their response has been that they have heard that FIU is a racist institute and because of this they are going to college out of town or out of state.
