

Contributors

CHARLES M. ANDREWS, the eminent American historian needs no recital of his qualifications, contributions, and honors, to introduce him to our readers. His interest in the Indians of Florida dates back to the time of his researches for his writings in American Colonial history. For some years he has maintained a winter home at Jupiter, Florida, and has done additional research on the subject. He has also travelled extensively in Florida and the adjacent regions.

DUVON CLOUGH CORBITT, Ph.D., is a professor in Candler College, Havana, Cuba. Part I of The Administrative System in the Floridas, 1783-1821 appeared in Tequesta, 1942.

FREDERICK M. HUDSON, has been a resident of Florida since 1900 and of Miami and Dade County since 1905. He has played a prominent part in the political and legal history of Dade County and of the entire state of Florida. He was State Senator from 1905 to 1917 and was president of the Senate in 1909. He writes of early Dade County out of wide experience as well as familiarity with legal and legislative records. He was president of this society in 1942.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The war has affected the activities of the Historical Association of Southern Florida much as it has all other civilian activities. The editor has been on leave of absence since February 1, from his work at the University of Miami. Scarcity and high cost of materials have compelled us to cut down the number of pages in this issue. Our good friend Watt M. Marchman who was contributing what was to be our annual feature, Florida in History and Literature, was called into the Army and we are forced to omit that service to students of Florida History.

