COUNCIL MEETING

The regular monthly meeting of Oakland Park City Council was held Wednesday evening July 5. While there were quite lengthy discussions of many issues, there was no definite action taken on any major problem.

One thing however, was done in the way of safety measures. Signs are to be placed on the Dixie Hwy. at both the northern and southern approaches to the 2nd street crossing of the FEC railway. Also the police car is to be so lettered.

There was a request for a street light to be placed on N. W. 1st Street, near the Shuffleboard club.

Discussion of out-of-town calls with a committee from the Volunteer Fire Department also took some time. Decision on this problem was deferred pending further investigation.

MIDNIGHT MEETING

Mr. and Mrs. Dan McEnany and family of Oakdale Trailer Park have returned from their vacation trip to New York City, Philadelphia, Washington and Columbus, Ohio. Mr. McEnany tells us one of the most surprising things which happened on their trip occurred in New York City. It seems that Mr. McEnany wanted his son to see Broadway and 42nd street at midnight.

Accordingly he and the boy started out one night and arrived at the famous corner just as the clock was triking twelve. As they stood a moment watching the scenes about them, someone patted the elder McEnany on the back saying, "What are you doing here?" It was a friend of his from Dayton, Ohio.

David Dominick has returned from a trip to Alabama and Arkansas.

LIONS INSTALL OFFICERS

On Monday evening, July 10, the Oakland Park Lions club held their annual dinner and installation of officers, which was held at the Ohio Club on Route 84, about 55 members, wives, and guests attending.

Guests of honor were Past President Curtis L. Straker, Fort Lauderdale, and National Councillor Earl Middleton. Mr. Middleton was the installing officer, and he spoke about the development of Lionism in the United States and foreign countries.

The outgoing president, Ephraim Adkins, spoke briefly on the work accomplished during the past year in Oakland Park, thanking those present for the help he had been given and pledging his support to the new officers.

Officers installed were president, Russel Daniel; first vice-president, C. B. Maxson; second vice-president Ward Crandall; third vice-president, Clark Keebler.

T. C. Moore was reinstated as secretary; Leonard Cahill, treasurer; M. K. Hogan, Lion Tamer. Joe Lee Goodbread was again chosen as Tail Twister.

Hold over directors were Colley White and Mitchell Zeigler. Newly elected to the board of directors and installed were Mayor J. D. Hawkins and Everett Bates.

Entertainment for the affair was furnished by Johann Noes of the Kae-Win.

ELKS NATIONAL CONVENTION

Although the National Convention of the B. P. I. Elks was held in Miami last week, Fort Lauderdale appeared to be sub-convention headquarters.

A steady stream of visitors flowed through our city shopping, filling to capacity the jungle cruise boats, and thoroughly enjoying the beauty of our community.

Highlighting the Fort Lauderdale participation in the convention was the Florida Dinner last Monday night at the Floridian Hotel on Miami Beach.

Arthur O'Hea, state president presided over the dinner and the Fort-Lauderdale Ritualistic team, who were National Champions were guests at the dinner.

THE OLD MAN

Inside I glowed with the realization, that just as the Old Man was the greatest oracle since Aristotle, I was his Bosworth.

At long last I came to the familiar last bend in the trail, another few hundred feet and I should again stand before the swami of the swamps.

The scene that met my eyes when I turned the last bend almost numbed me. I stood back aghast, befuddled and non-plussed.

There, where the old man's shack had once stood in majestic loneliness, was the beginnings of what looked like an Army camp.

The old 'gator bog was getting concrete walls and had a label "swimming pool".

Out back of where his hencoop had stood an open-sided building was labeled "laundry".

That did it. I knew the old man never bothered with any such technical and earthly details as wash-I started to turn away in dismay when I saw the old man. himself, standing idly under a custard apple tree, watching the progress of construction.

"Old man," I cried, "what's going on? Did those loan companies foreclose on you and start making your place into a low cost housing project."

The old man looked at me, his

YOUTH CENTER PROBLEMS

With opening day of July 4th come and gone and still much work can be made available for the young people of our community, the board of directors faced the problem this last week of determining how to proceed without money.

Said President Robert M. Curtis, "The board considered three possible ways of meeting this problem.

1. Ask the city to take over the center as part of its municipal recreation program.

2. Ask the community chest to include it as an agency.

3. Ask for monthly contributions from local organizations.

The Youth Center problem focuses the attention of our community upon a very serious problem.

This program began without any survey of community needs and without sufficient thought concerning where it would fit into the recreational program of the city as a whole.

It is assumed that there is a need for a youth center.

It is assumed that the city either officially or as interested citizens will support such a program.

And yet this program has been an orphan without security, shelter and guidance.

Incorporation into a city wide plan for an integrated recreational program meeting the needs of young and old in all sections of the city would perhaps give the Youth Center the greatest stability and make it most useful to the young people.

Such a program would call for a trained director who would appreciate the opportunities available through such a center and through such a city wide effort.

Will You Open the Window Please? By RUTH BRENNER

(ED'S NOTE: Last week, you will remember, we left the Brenner family preparing for "the Little Whizzer"—lamps had been filled, flashlights had been checked and the girls were running water into pails and tubs

Mixer was chilling in the refrigerator, enough food for ten extra people was piled here and there about the kitchen. We had brought in a box for the dog, which box now unfortunately contained a pair of wet rubber boots with a rain coat hung ingeniously above so that its dripping was caught in one upright boot. (I didn't know it then, but our bedraggled pup was sound asleep in the basket of clean clothes.)

There were hammer, a saw, nails, neatly set out in rows all right, but a pitfall when one attempted to get to the cupboard.

We also had the ten large bouquets of hibiscus and oleander which Toni had gathered in order to cheat the winds of them, and there were two dish pans full of guavas Joyce thoughtfully supplied to "eat with salt, while we play Hearts."

The kitchen got smaller and smaller, the house began to smell like houses insist upon smelling in 'cane weather. Also, with the shutters all on, even though the lee windows remained open, it was a mite warm, though this felt good to me, for I had not yet changed to dry clothing.

Night, extremely black without street lights and with the last train creeping north along the FEC tracks changed the sound of rain on our metal roof from the quick pop of rifle bullets to rumbling artillery. The storm would soon be here now.

The girls and I did the supper dishes, while outside the windows bamboo creaked, squealed and swooshed. Between the bamboo and

To entertain the children one time. I made up a story about that fireplace and the noise it makes during a hurricane and the more I thought about it now, the more reasonable it sounded to me. I had told my two little daughters that a storm devil had lost his way the night of the '26 storm and had fallen down our chimney, where he had passed out like a light.

"That fall took the wind out of his sails, alright," I declared, adding that when he came to, weak and sore, deserted by family and friends alike, he had decided to stay quietly in the chimney until he got back his strength. Then I went on to say that he was still there, spending most of his time sleeping. However, when the barometer fell, it gave him insomnia, and damp weather aggravated his rhuematism.

Then, Elmer, as we named him, cannot help overhearing the weather reports as they come in to us from the Miami Weather Bureau. So, by the time the storm arrives, he is as excited as the rest of the family and not half as tired.

Thus, when the high winds strike, Elmer begins a mournful moaning to his breathren overhead to get him out of there. Occasionally, one of his wilder kin, swoops low over our roof, blowing "WHO-O-O" down at him, scattering dust and soot all over the living room, while trying to encourage our home loving banshee to come along on a quick trip upstate. However, Elmer always loses heart at the last minute, moaning "Neo-o-o-o" in his mournful way and stays put, convinced that he is too old for that sort of thing, after all.

Suddenly, whether it was because there was no more work to keep me busy, or because of an especially loud groan from Elmer, I began to feel uneasy. Thinking to find masculine encouragement, I went into the living room in search of my husband. Thank goodness, the electricity was still on.

As I entered the living room door, what I saw convinced me once and for all that I am one woman who will never understand the Masculine Point of View. For there on the davenport, freshly dressed in dry clothing, lay my husband quietly reading and smoking. But that wasn't what stopped me dead in my tracks, rendering me unable to reply to his cheery greeting.

"Good Boarding, dear," he shouted. "And how are you this fine Boarding?"

In silence, I pulled myself together, pointing a trembling finger at the electric fan. Then, if one could be said to yell in tones of awe, I

"What," I inquired, striving to make myself heard above the roaring wind, "are you doing in this hundred mile gale, with the electric fan turned on?"

Still placid, he replied but his words were lost in a new loud moan from the fireplace, and the sound of a coconut hitting the roof. What he said sounded a little like, "It's too" something or other. Seeing by the look on my face that I had not heard, he drew another breath to outshout the wind.

Opening his mouth, he roared, "IT'S " and just then the wind ceased completely. The lull had come and in that dead calm my neighbors for blocks around must have heard my husband's earsplitting declaration:

"TOO STUFFY IN HERE!"

IN THE MAIL BAG

We are in receipt of this note postmarked from Newark, N. J., June 29, 1950:

Gentlemen:

A friend of mine from Fort Lauderdale has sent me your booklet, the Fort Lauderdale Times.

Very interesting booklet, but I have one sugestion to make—that is, to number your pages. Wanted to refer to a couple of articles in this booklet, but noticed the pages are not numbered.

Would be very handy and convenient to number the pages, so when you refer to a certain page, the number is right there.

Just a suggestion.

Cordially yours, (Miss) Ann Yarum

Looks as though we'll have to start numbering our pages, all right!

Mrs. Case presented each of the fifteen officers with gifts which were lovely crocheted "hankies" that she had made personally.

YOUR MAGIC CARPET (Part 2)

This may seem high, but remember that rugs get more wear and tear than any other houshold item. Also, you will be changing your draperies and other accessories from time to time but floor coverings will be with you for a long time.

Choose colors, patterns and textures that will harmonize with a variety of color schemes, so when you do redecorate, your rugs will still be apropos. Likewise choose colorss, patterns and textures that you will not grow tired of.

Wall-to-wall carpet is very practical and absorbs a great deal of noise. Too, it creates an effect of greater spaciousness and reduces the hazards of slipping that go with polished hardwood floors.

However, if you prefer rugs and polished floors, make certain that the rug fits the room. Space between the rug and the wall should never be over 18 inches, and the smaller the room the narrower this distance should be.

Always lay your rugs parallel to the walls and to each other, and relate them to focal points such as the fireplace, doorways and windows.

Patterned floor-coverings are easier on the busy housewife than plain ones; they disguise wear and are much more simple to keep clean.

If your room is already full of pattern, you will find self-tone fabrics suitable. These are made of several closely related shades of color and create an indefinite design that goes well with most any kind of furnishings.

If you have growing children, you will find that looped-pile and hard twisted weaves are amazingly sturdy, but keep feline pets away from such rugs because even the most firmly-anchored loops lose out in a battle with cat's claws.

Remember, there is a good floor covering for every conceivable taste and purpose, and the homeowner with imagination will utilize them

Above all, your home should be the expression of your personality. It should be as natural and becoming to you as your favorite dress and as comfortable as your oldest slippers.

Choose only those floor coverings that suit your needs and tastes, then your house will have a distinct individuality all its own.

(If you want advice on any home decoration problem, write to Florence Peabody, Gill Construction Co., P. O. Box 38, Fort Lauderdale, Florida.)
