A FAMILY PROBLEM
Editor, Miami Life:
Will you please print this in your paper, which, to my way of thinking, is the best journal in Miami.

I have at last found, according to my opinion, and that of all my friends, the lowest and meanest man in Miami. My wife and I were at a night club the other night and we met a man who has always been respected by the whole community. He was drunk and was with a crowd of common men and women, having, as he described it, "a hell of a good time."

At the same time this man's wife, who is an adorable little woman, and who, in the early days of their struggles went to work day by day to help them keep the wolf from the door and to save enough money to get ahead, is now undergoing an operation of a serious nature in the hospital, while he is entertaining in their lovely home.

I wish the readers of Miami Life to give me their opinion. Can I invite this man to my home again? Is he a fit associate for decent people? I hate to cut him, as my wife is very fond of his wife, and all of our mutual friends admire her so, and I don't want to hurt her.

FOR AMERICA FIRST AND ALWAYS.
Miami, Fla., Jan. 10, 1928.
Editor, Miami Life:
A certain incident happened yesterday at Miami Beach which deserves your attention.

Senate Bill No. 295, of the Acts of 1927, gives apartment house owners a lien upon the goods and chattels of tenants residing in the building for unpaid rents and advances. It also makes the removal by the tenant of his goods without the payment of all such indebtedness a criminal offense punishable by not less than three months in jail or $50, nor more than one year in jail, or $1,000.

Yesterday in a South Beach apartment a situation occurred, explained by the statute, wherein a tenant was removing his goods and chattels from the premises when he owed rent and a laundry bill advanced by

Editor, Miami Life:
The writer is a young lady resident of Miami of five years, and a subscriber to Miami Life. I beg to take the liberty to request that you have written up an item which would serve to spread public indignation throughout the city on the following topic:

It has become almost impossible for a lady to go about with her husband, or for a girl to go about with her fiancé at night without the public embarrassment brought about by "public street jades" (ladies of the evening). They sit in front of one on the street cars, buses, etc., and continually turn around and endeavor to attract attention of the gentleman escort, much to the embarrassment and thorough disgust of the young lady; and I think it is about time that a district be established, or some other way devised which would tend to keep these public nuisances in one section, and not permit their monopoly of Miami Beach and Miami, for both cities are infested with them.

Please use your own language and give the public an article which may help the cause along, at least nothing can be lost by trying.

Yours very truly,

controversy, he allowed the tenant to disturb the peace, use profane and abusive language, and to commit an assault, and then refused to intervene for the landlord in protecting her lien by saying that he had no time.

A violation of the above mentioned statute was being perpetrated; in other words, a crime was being committed, and a police officer, knowing that such was the case, allowed a crime against the laws of this state to be committed practically in his presence.

The property owners deserve some consideration, especially since they are the ones that pay the salaries for the police force, but it seems that a property owner cannot have his property protected by the police force of Miami Beach, which is more interested in arresting motorists who accidentally happen to have but one light burning than in preventing actual crimes from being committed.

There is no question but that a police officer has the authority to prevent the commission of any crime, even if the crime is against the laws of the state, especially when it is about to be committed in his presence.

This situation has been going on for some time at the Beach and deserves considerable publicity, as the administration does not seem to care to remedy the same. I prefer that you do not mention my name in this matter, but I desire that you give this incident some publicity.

Very truly yours,
R. W. G.

COSMOPOLITAN BUNCH
Editor, Miami Life:
Is Miami still under the Stars and Stripes? I am an American, born forty-eight years ago, and was quite surprised to see a foreign hand leading the parade last Saturday. Why was not the American Legion band in the lead, where they should have been? It is bad enough that we have to take Scotch (not in bottles) twice a day in the park. I have been in all the large cities in the United States, and I know that there are thousands of real good bands in this country. Why the imported stuff? Especially when we have better.

Are those Scotch citizens? Have they a legal right to play here by the season; and the songs that they think are new I heard when a boy.

Give us home brew—to hell with the imported stuff!

A One-Horse or a 400-Horse Town?

Some of our ministerial friends are lifting their resonant and dignified voices against supperclubbing, Sunday dancing, horse racing and other alleged pitfalls that Miami is said to be stumbling into this season. And, probably from instinct, the main outcry is against the race track.

Miami today is not a one-horse town, say what they will. And do Miami preachers want to see it a one-horse town? Well, for one thing, we don't believe that even the most ardent reformers would want to go back to a one-horse town preacher's pay.

Miami has a most reasonable and tolerant public. Sometimes it leans a little too much toward tolerance, but it is better to lean too much that way than to lean toward intolerance. Come to think about it, Miami's tolerance is probably one of Miami's greatest assets. For tolerance inspires the friendship of everybody who visits in Miami.

There are fine men in Miami who are opposed to horse racing and betting, but they have repeatedly declared they would do nothing to obstruct a sport in which so many others appear to take such evident enjoyment. And that seems to be the attitude of the non-racing public in Miami—and will continue to be the attitude, as long as general conditions are as dignified and as restrained as they were on the opening days of this week.

Eliminating the Miami River

Some time ago Miami Life suggested that the river be filled in and another channel be constructed to provide an outlet either to the north or south of Miami in less congested areas than the downtown section. Since then, we have received so many commendatory letters on this subject that we are certain our solution of the traffic problem is very close to being the logical solution.

We have one amendment, as one of our readers has suggested. The river need not be filled in. It needs only to be declared un navigable by the war department, which would do away with drawbridges. Undoubtedly the war department would consent to this, if Miami dredged another outlet just as practicable for navigation as the present river.

This would eliminate the most serious objection to Miami Life's plan—the ruination to much valuable waterfront property.

This is something for the city plan commission to work on.

Love in a Lumber Camp
BY JOHN KIMBLE

A gripping story of romance, intrigue and adventure in the wilds of Florida, full of the richly colored descriptions, sparkling dialogue and profound philosophy that have made Mr. Kimble what he is today. Passed by the Miami Chamber of Commerce, the Florida Federation of Music Clubs, and the Dugout.

NIGHT had fallen in the Florida village, but eggs were higher than ever. The stars came out and a gentle hail began to fall in northeastern Nebraska. Nevertheless the town clock struck seven. You couldn't fool the clock.

Brilliantine, the beautiful daughter of Rowdy McGee, the hard-boiled mill boss, stood on the verandah of their cottage in the midst of the clearing. It was called the clearing house. This was quite appropriate, as McGee in his youth had worked in a bank for many years. It was a sandbank, but no one knew any difference. McGee then had been engaged in making sandbags for prominent newspaper publishers, but he had quit while still young and gone into the mill sauce.

"I am still young," he had said, in talking the matter over with his pick and shovel, "and this is a sordid occupation. Besides, newspaper publishers aren't using sandbags as much as they used to. They nearly all switched over to apple-sauce."

So he had come to Florida with his infant daughter and settled in the little mill town where he rose rapidly, every morning. Brilliantine had grown into a striking young woman. In fact the only things in town that were more striking were the town clock and the mill workers' union.

As Brilliantine stood on the verandah, young Pietro Olaf McManus walked up and bowed stiffly. He was a big stiff, anyhow. He played buzz-saw in the mill band.

"I love you," he said simply.

"The hell you do!" replied Brilliantine, blushing prettily.

"I do, too," said Pietro.

"You don't neither," said Brilliantine.

"I do."

"You don't."

"Do."

"Don't."

They might have carried the conversation further—out to the ash can, perhaps, but just then a deafening crash was heard.

"What's that?" cried Brilliantine.

"Somebody crashing the gate at the Embassy Club," suggested Pietro.

But he realized immediately that he was wrong. It was really the price of admission tickets to the Red Grange football game dropping, far to the southward, in Miami. In the distance they could hear faint cries of anguish from the folks who had paid $13.20 three days before for their tickets.

Pietro reverently removed his hat from the gate-post.

"Poor devils," he said softly and stood for several moments with bowed head. His legs were slightly bowed also. It was a to this day that she cast chicken-feed about her, which may be the truth, for the girl had plenty of grit and chickens are notoriously fond of grit. However that may be, Pietro advanced a step toward Rowdy.

"I am advancing one step," he said curtly. "Please do not ask for any more on account."

Rowdy knit his brows, using the Palm Beach stitch. He was a patriotic Floridian.

"What are your intentions?" he demanded, toying with his slingshot.

"I have proposed to your daughter, sir," said Pietro haughtily.

"Ah! And what did you propose?"

Pietro's hand flashed back to his hip as he intended to shoot. Rowdy fired his slingshot, striking Pietro between the eyes with a stone. The young man staggered, then produced his hip flask and returned the shot.

"Have a little shot," he said to Rowdy. Rowdy took the shot and then he staggered, too.

"Now we're even," hissed Pietro. He turned toward Brilliantine.

"Marry me," he pleaded. "Marry me, or I shall commit race suicide."

Brilliantine nodded. She was fast asleep. That was one good thing about Brilliantine—she was never fast when she was awake no matter how she might be when she was asleep.

The town clock struck seven again.

You couldn't fool the clock.

above all else in hiring waiters and attendants.

This week's toll was large. One woman laid out by a pop bottle and her assailant rendered unconscious; another woman slapped and her dress torn from her by an irate man, presumably her husband (he did it so unconcernedly); a young fellow's cheek smashed in by another young buck; an elderly man's eye blacked by a young husband for nothing more than a drunken, and most general wink; a tipsy manufacturer doubled up by a blow to the midriff by a blonde, bob-haired Amazon—these were a few instances of misbehavior on New Year's Eve.

A rather amusing thing happened at the Rainbow Gardens the other night when a young matron stumbled and she and her partner fell very awkwardly. Two plain-clothes men seized the young man and started him for the door. The husband ran up, fists doubled, and started to crown him. It was only by a completely sober mien that the young man got off without a beating; he finally convinced all concerned that he had not knocked the girl down.

OUR GENTLE BOYS AND GIRLS

The Miami dance and supper club crowd seems to have a rough-house complex lately. Fist fights, boisterous arguments, man-and-wife embroglios have become more numerous than ever before—in fact, I don't remember of seeing anything like this in seasons past except at cheap roadhouses. Now scarcely any reputable place is free from disorder and managements are beginning to demand physique

AVIATION

Miami can show even Lindbergh something unique in American aviation.

In his recent tour of the Union, Colonel Lindbergh was behind his schedule just once—and then because of a fog.

What a tribute to Miami's airport future.

Such a thing as a dense fog is unknown in Miami. Once or twice a year, for ten minutes in the morning, there may be a touch of fog in Miami. But no more.

Miami was the first home port reached by the "Good Will Fliers" on their return to this country—a significant fact.

With a fog-free climate where fliers can train the year round in comfort, with good land and seaplane landing places already in existence, with Government air mail service taking form, and with enthusiastic support for flying already organized here, Miami's future as an airport is a certainty.

Necromancer and Sleuth of the Underworld Reports Conditions Chaotic in the Political Field; Prospective Sheriffs Only Bright Spot.

Dear Voters Dade County Florida (and don't they wish they were in another state)

Having not much knowledge of anything you will doubtless be agreeably surprised to teach yourselves by reading my carefully selected information and you'll probably chip in more to my fee of 50 $ and no cents than you will to the Democratic convention after I turn loose the spigot and let the political run out.

Even though most of you have lost your mortgages having had to use them last week in order to warm up the house the news which I shall convey will be so hot that you won't mind the cold weather.

Electioneering on soon as investigators have to get busy and look over the entries and what a time they'll have if Gov Martin makes up his mind to fire all sheriffs and appoint a bunch of Jacksonville men as cleaners up.

I have selected my committee and will make the com of 1000 look sick especially when I name Mr DuPont and Mr Elliott and Mr Bob Watson and Mr Jim Hathaway to guide us struggling non taxpayers thru the wilderness and have them tell the boys to cheer up and hurry up and line up and help to the old line.

For the office of sheriff I have nominated the following and as they all needed a bit of coaching before entering the race you can thank me if any one of them get elected especially as Sheriff Henry says there is no need of spending money to elect a sheriff as he is personally satisfied to remain especially as the other candidates don't know enough of sheriff hardships and are not quite ready to leave home and mother.

And the men whom I've selected answer roll call as follows and their statements follows as per wit:

Louis Allen—I will be elected sheriff on a platform which I shall soon announce provided Harry Platt can think up a good one otherwise there is no need of any other candidate running until he sees me and then he will surry to cover.

Bill Smith—I am logical for sheriff for I have done constabular for a long time and any man which can constable under a Dade county justice of the peace should be rewarded as he has shown his fitness and anyway I would rather have my office in the new county bldg and you can soon visit me there.

Joe Lockridge—You can stop your investigations right now I accept the nomination even though I am unaccustomed to public speaking.

"Pop" Lehman—Chiefing of police in Coral Gables reveals that I save the city money if I can save the city money by keeping citizens from breaking into jail what couldn't I do in the whole of Dade county thus I greet you as your next sheriff.

Constable Hinson—I certainly would like the job of sheriff after you have lived out here in Cocunut Grove for any length of time you are ready to take any office and I am not afraid to start in as sheriff.

There gentle readers you have the inside facts of conditions regarding the sheriffs office and the expose could only have come about by clever undercover investigation as the newly married man said.

Next week I shall reveal other information about political and I do not know which office to start in on but I might look into Bob Taylors job or Bill Hills job or Tom Norfleets job or Jim Floods job or any other number of jobs except the county commissioners and the reason I dont go up there is because I might get thrown out which would be all right as them county commissioners are going to have the same thing happen to them and the aforementioned Bobs and Jims and Toms might not want anything said about their jobs and as my fee is only 50 $ and no cents they have a few days left in which to call me up.

Yours for public research, (at a profit) ISA SEEKER, (Investigator—Special).

Round the Town with ROD

EVERYTHING

MIAMI is cosmopolitan in more ways than one. Every kind of apartment house exists here, from the one room "efficiency," meaning no room at all, to palatial quarters of four rooms or more. Some of these palace apartments are really wonderful. The halls make one think of his conception of King Tut's tomb, but the monthly rental reminds one that this is 1927, and things have changed since Tut's demise. One thing is a cinch—they do not remind us of the old home up North. Prices on apartments now run from $25 per month or what have you, for small ones on the edge of the Everglades, to several times that amount for luxurious quarters near down town. In most cases everything is furnished from plenty of mosquitoes to a neighborhood with a Victrola or howling dog, either of which is very likely to tune in just as you want to go to sleep.

MIAMI RIPPLES

WANDERING down Flagler street these days it is easy to see that the season has arrived. One notes all types of humanity and they present an ever interesting study. Here we have the smug Yankee from New England, in this land of sunshine and flowers to escape a villain-out winter and determined to get his money's worth. Mother is with him and she is equally determined that no leather nickels are going to be passed their way. Then we see the prosperous looking Hoosier, carefully scrutinizing the high buildings, pointing and waving his arms like one of the old time binder boys selling a lot. He has a five dollar bill carefully concealed on his person and anyone who can make him change it will realize little profit in the transaction. He came down in the family Ford and is keenly disappointed that the tin can camps are a matter of history. On the corner, looking more or less disconsolate, stand a pair of sleek looking gentlemen who live by their wits and off the gullibility of many Miami visitors. They came down to escape the cold and incidentally to make a killing among the tourists. Somehow the signs are not right, though, and they are discussing the advisability of flitting back North while they can still ride the cushions.

THE SCOTCH

CLIFF PHILLIPS, who officiated in the final day Sunday of the Miami open golf tournament, reports that he started out with four shiny dimes to mark the balls of the players in his foursome. At the end of the eighteen holes he found that he had lost two of the dimes. Needless to say, Jock Hutchison was a member of the foursome. So Jock got more out of the tournament than merely second prize money.

UNCLE TOM PASSES

Uncle Tom Gaddis is dead. For the last year or two Uncle Tom wasn't seen much, because failing health forced him to his chair on the porch at Spanish Village and left him only his books his jolly humor, and his memories. It was only a small segment of his formerly vast circle of friends who watched him die like a gentleman—gradually, without a whimper—although he knew it—and laughed with him in spite of their sorrow.

It's hard to believe that Uncle Tom is dead—Uncle Tom, who famous humorists have always said would never die. Two or three years ago he was the life of polo, horsemanship, the beach, and any night party, no matter how late or how early. I'd love to know what all Uncle Tom knew and I'd love to have all the experiences the adorable old man had. And I'd love to be able to print some of the marvelous po-

"We'll have to get some more TNT—I see Uncle Tom still walking around."

FOLLOWING LINDY'S TRIP

It will be news to a large number of people that all the particulars of "Lindy's" central American flight came through the Tropical Radio Corporation's station near Opa-locka. Two minutes after "WE" arrived in Costa Rica the Tropical Radio was relaying the fact to New York. This radio station is becoming an important link in the chain of stations throughout the world and will become more so as time goes on. A large amount of South American business messages pass every day, mostly in connection with fruit shipments.

OUR NEWSPAPERS

MENTAL habits of years' standing are hard to shake off. Constantly, despite the increasing economic pressure that has caused us to concentrate on the quickest and simplest means of corraling the almighty dollar, we are tempted to lapse into the writing methods that made the late "Lyre" column the joy it was to conduct, if not to read.

One peruses the local dailies, than which there is no whither when it comes to richness of material for the hand of a hardened fashioner of wheezes. "Given a set of morning papers and a reasonable amount of writing ability," old Frank Adams once wrote, "the merest infant can put together a presentable newspaper column."

Thus he could not escape the headline, "Believes Youth Slain For $40." Impecunious as any writer would be in these post-boom environs, the first comment that would occur to him, we fancy, would be an offer to believe anything of anybody for half that amount. Similarly, another of our esteemed journals reports that "the stage is low at Okeechobee." Mustard and ice cream! If the stage is any more disheartening there than it is here, where nothing better than fifth-rate musical comedy has held the boards within the memory of the Oldest Inhabitant, he might

And along Bay street, where friendly trees offer a hitching post to overzealous tourists who labor under the impression that they must imbibe all the joy-juice in one night, you will find Allan Kelly, Bill Brewer, Bruce Thompson, Bruce Bethel, the Butlers, and the Collins, and the other purveyors, smacking of their chops, and carefully wrapping up choice packages that no visitor may go away saying hospitality lay dormant in the Bahamas.

Next Thursday comes to bat "Pop" Nesie, formerly of Savannah, of all way points south, including Miami. "Pop" has been a guest of Bahamas for some time and the 19th he is to face the pitcher, erwise, The Crown, for having mingled and interfered with runners who had been practicing their dangerous game.

as you know, is some ars of age. He has been soner of the Bahamas for four months. The govern- would also like to inter-Coastguardman Christen- for it was on a coastguard that the activities of "Pop" first noticed, and those ac- egies, if allegations are true, at to his king and later dis- ing of the proceeds in Miami.

of freed, "Pop" will probably be ported. If he is deported back to the U. S. he will again run into ough water—that is unless his many Republican friends have buried the case—for "Pop" was found guilty in a federal court of conspiracy, but, wiselike, he escaped while in the clutches of a friendly lawyer.

The editors who visited Miami during Palm Fete week are expected over here Sunday. They will come as the guests of the Old Colony Club and Captain Linton who operates the "Princess Montague."

The TELL-TALE TOURIST

THE owner of a small apartment house on N. W. Second street has received several electric light bills lately that he is a little worried about. He is wondering how the Florida Power and Light Company gets that way. He had a number of meters in the place. Some are entirely cut off and no charge is made on them. He has two others, however, which are connected up but, at present, not used. The minimum charge is one dollar a month. Here's what the bills say: Nov. 2-Dec. 1—$1.23; Dec. 3-Jan. 4, $1.00. They show no current used. The explanation given is that the first bill was a few days over the month and the 23 cents took care of that. But the second bill was dated from six days before the termination of the first bill. Work it out for yourself.

THE official cutter-off for the F. P. and L. company dropped into a 52nd Street home the other day and proceeded to cut the power off. He had his orders. There was nothing owing at that house but the tenant did owe a bill of $2.46 for about a year ago. There is a very young baby at that house and that particular night it was very cold. The wife of the tenant happened to have the money and paid the bill, also one dollar service charge for turning the juice on again. As the F. P. and L. company has a deposit of $5 on this meter it was amply protected. Looks like a plain case of trying to be nasty about it.

FELICIA RYBIER, famous Polish pianist, will appear at a concert in White Temple on January 23, under the auspices of the Junior department of the Miami Woman's club. Miss Rybier started her musical career at the age of twelve, in Germany, and appeared in Vienna, London and Paris.

If you haven't visited "The Frolics" (formerly The Rainbow Gardens), "Miami's most beautiful night club, you are missing the time of your life. The revues "Zula Dance," "Windmill Revue" and "Lucky Lindy" numbers are being presented in Miami for the first time. Costumes in these numbers are original, presenting striking effects, especially in the "Lucky Lindy" number. Dainty Margaret White, peppy and original mistress of ceremony, has joined the title of Miami's most popular entertainer. She adds to the show with songs and dances done in her own imitable style. MORE ABOUT UNIVERSITY FOOTBALL

Editor Miami Life:

THE writer read with interest the letter of W. E. G. relative to getting another football coach at Miami University.

The writer witnessed many practice sessions when the men were being drilled in tackling the dummy and Courtney usually tackled the dummy about twice or three times as an example for the rest to follow.

The huddle system for calling signals was originated to be used when the cheering and noise was so great that oral signals could not be heard.

Courtney was a bad passer all season. A good coach would have corrected this in Courtney.

Oh, my! Oh, my! I could write for a week and not cover the subject of lack of coaching.

Forward passing was pitifully attempted about one-quarter of each game, even though the opponents' line outweighed Miami's line and backfield 20 to 30 pounds to the man. Material? What better material would one want in Rod Ashman, the left end? He played a wonderful individual game on defense. He was really better than any end that played here during the season.

Among other duties, a coach develops players. Lyons was an experienced high school player. He was ruined this season at Miami University.
