Wanted: President & Four Deans

From president to deans, the search is on to fill several high-ranking positions at FIU with energetic administrators possessing impressive backgrounds for our multi-campus university, in a multi-ethnic, multicultural community with an international thrust.

One hundred and forty-two people have submitted applications to the Presidential Search Advisory Committee chaired by Dr. Gerald Lattin, Dean, School of Hospitality Management, in hopes that they will be selected to fill the post soon to be vacated by President Harold Crosby.

Minimum selection criteria set by the committee requires that candidates in and outside of the academic world should: hold a doctorate, have a minimum of five years of experience in a responsible academic administrative position, have a minimum of ten years of academic and/or professional experience, have been in a tenure earning capacity at a college or university, have served as a classroom teacher at the rank of instructor or higher and provide evidence of scholarly achievement, show evidence of or interest in a commitment to international development and/or education, and show clearly recognized evidence of community involvement.

Of a pool of 142 candidates, Lattin said "we have elevated 31 candidates from the large pool for intensive study. We have not eliminated anyone at this time. We hope to have 6 to 10 finalists selected and submitted to the Chancellor (BOR) by December 1."

Candidates presently employed by FIU include Dr. Joseph Olander, Executive Vice President.

One hundred and thirty persons have applied for the Dean of Education position to be vacated by Dr. Wesley Sowards who has been granted a leave of absence.

Qualifications for the position include an Ed.D or Ph.D. in an appropriate field of education, evidence of research activity and successful teaching experience in higher education, or experience in a leadership role in the educational arena.

In a survey of major issues taken by faculty members in the School of Education, the search and screen committee, chaired by Dr. Jan L. Tucker, Associate Professor, Secondary Educ., found that among those issues is the need for support of faculty development, future emphasis on doctoral programs, developing a unified approach to student recruitment, and increasing articulation with community colleges.

To insure that FIU's desire to encourage and establish positive relationships between the Dade County Public School System (the 5th largest in the United States), and the School of Education becomes reality, Dr. Johnny L. Jones, superintendent, Dade County School Board, and Mr. Pat Tornillo, Jr., executive vice president, United Teachers of Dade, are both members of the committee.

Applicants for that position who are presently employed by FIU include Dr. George S. Morrison, Chairperson, Division of Childhood Education, Dr. Donald C. Smith, Acting Associate Dean, School of Education, and Dr. Ulysses Van Spiva, Associate Executive Vice President.

The committee for the Dean for the School of Public Affairs and Services "is a brand new committee, for a brand new dean, for a brand new school," said Professor Yvonne Bacarisse,

Enrollment Up at FIU

There was good news from the university in recent weeks. Enrollment has climbed again. By September 25, the last day to register or change a course, 11,200 students had registered as degree seeking candidates or special students at the Tamiami campus, the North Miami campus, or in off-campus courses.

The figures are more than nice round numbers. They represent the first step toward resolution of a budget crisis that hit the university this year after a decrease in full-time student enrollment in '77-'78. While the number of students attending FIU continued to increase (in 1976-77, it was 10,262 and in 1977-78, 10,948), these students do not each represent an FTE (the equivalent of one student taking 15 credit hours). Based on the 6,479 FTE enrollment for '77-'78 (which was under the 7,323 projection), parts of the budget for the university for '78-'79 were cut in the past legislative session.

The cuts meant some unfilled faculty and staff positions were frozen or eliminated, fewer temporary positions were available for help in departments, and budgets for certain material resources and operating expenses had to be trimmed.

The good news on enrollment figures is attributable to a cooperative effort among divisions of the university who executed a community awareness campaign to maximize visibility for and interest in the university's courses and degree programs.

The School and College Relations office staff, with extra volunteers, made 4,000 phone calls to students who had initiated but not completed the registration process. The callers explained "special student" status, meaning a student could register on September 25 without being formally admitted, and if accepted later as a degree-seeking student, would receive full credit from those courses toward the degree.

Callers also attempted to put potential students in touch with the appropriate office to handle questions ranging from missing transcripts to financial aid information.

In the first weeks of September, School and College Relations staffers—and helpers from University Relations and other divisions—also spent evenings and weekends in shopping centers around Dade County, handing out catalogues, departmental brochures, and other literature and explaining how to get into FIU and what one could get into once in. They also brought their materials to area community colleges, and explained the streamlined transfer process from the two-year schools to the upper-level university.

The Information Services Department, meanwhile, visited radio and TV stations, developing public service spots to air during the same weeks before registration. Feature spots emphasized the sharing side of education—going back to school with...friend, family member, parent, or child.

The Information Services Department and School and College Relations split the tab to run ads in local papers listing courses and announcing those still open as of the Sept. 25 registration day. The list of courses apparently motivated some people to choose a course or two for interest or self-expression in addition to those who found out about academic programs and majors.

While a student signed up for one or two courses does not constitute an all-important FTE and while the budget is based on number of FTE's, the more part-time and special students enroll, the higher the total of FTE's goes.

Several factors appear to combine to make a lowered course load the preference of a number of university students, even those pursuing degrees. The most important factor is the constraints of balancing school work with employment—a majority of our

PEOPLE

Elina Artigas, Student Affairs Coord., Career Development and Placement, delivered a presentation to the Presidential Forum, September 14th, at The Little Havana Activities Center. Topic addressed was "The Drop Out Rate of Hispanics in the Public School System of Dade County," with recommendations to alleviate this problem.

Sharon Collins, Director of Community Development at North Miami Campus, is now Director of Special Gifts, and will have University-wide responsibility. Mrs. Collins attended the State Mental Health Association Annual Meeting as delegate from Broward County which was held in Sarasota, Florida, October 12th through October 14th.

James E. Couch, Assoc. Prof., Communications Program, recently conducted a workshop for editors of the United Steelworkers Press Association at their National Convention in Atlantic City. Dr. John Remington and Andy Banks of the FIU Labor Institute also participated. The trio, along with other FIU and South Florida communicators, were judges in the Union's international newspaper evaluation contest.

Minnie Dunbar, Special Collections Librarian spent the summer working on a special Map Processing Project at the Library of Congress, Washington, D. C. She returned to FIU in early September with about 5,000 maps and atlases donated by the Library of Congress in exchange for her services.

Penelope S. Easton, Ph.D., R.D., Chr. and Prof., Dept. of Dietetics and Nutrition, School of Technology, is going to speak at Childbirth Parent Education Association teacher training workshop, "Montage of Childbirth '78," at the Holiday Inn in Coral Gables on Sun., Oct. 29, at 1:45 pm.

Joanne C. Cyek, a 1976 FIU Alumna, has joined the Alumni Affairs Office as Coordinator of Alumni Affairs. Her enthusiasm and dedication to serve the University and Alumni will strengthen the services of the Alumni Affairs Office.

Dr. Antonio Jorge, Exec. Asst. V-P, was appointed to a task force by State Commissioner of Education Ralph Turlington to study whether the state-mandated functional literacy and basic skills tests discriminate against minority students. The 15-member task force, headed by Secretary of State Jesse McCrary, includes state educators as well as local journalists Garth Reeves, Sr., publisher of the Miami Times, and Don Shoemaker, senior editor of The Miami Herald. The task force is to report its findings to the new governor and cabinet in January. Jorge, who also serves as the chairman of the state Commission on Hispanic Affairs, was invited to the White House to join President and Mrs. Carter in celebrating Hispanic Week while discussing the needs and problems of the Hispanic population in the U.S. Selected Hispanic leaders from around the country were invited to this event coinciding with a dinner hosted by the Congressional Hispanic Caucus, to which Dr. Jorge was also invited.

On Sept. 8, Dr. James McArthur addressed the Surfside Garden Club at Surfside Town Hall on "The Use of Artificial Lighting for Plant Growth" (sponsored by the Sylvania Speakers Bureau). On Sept. 26, Dr. McArthur spoke to the South Florida Chapter of the American Begonia Society meeting at Miami's Simpson Garden Center on the topic "Pests, Diseases and Cultural Techniques for Begonia."

Susan J. Myers, M.S., M.S.M., R.D., Asst. Prof., Dept. of Dietetics and Nutrition, School of Technology, spoke to the Hospital Institutional Education and Service Society Convention on September 7 at the Ft. Lauderdale Surf Motel on "Food Additives from the Pantry." She also spoke to the Banyan Chapter of the American Business Women's Association on September 21 on "Food Additives and the Consumer."

Professor Maria B. Ortiz-Morales, Health Services Administration, was invited by the University of Kansas City, Missouri, to participate in a three day seminar related to the minority elderly, sponsored by the Gerontology Center of the University. Professor Ortiz-Morales has been recently appointed Vice-Chairperson of the Plan Development Committee of Health Systems Agencies of South Florida.

Professor Gideon Peleg, Arts & Sci. NMC, will address the "Friends of Hebrew University" on Oct. 19, Montmartre Hotel. His talk, "Comparative Cultures: Israeli and Arabs," will explore the differences and similarities between the two cultures.

Sylvia L. Smith, M.S., Assoc. Prof., Medical Tech., has recently had her paper on "Transfer of Erythromycin Resistance from Clinically-isolated Lysogenic Strains of Streptococcus pyogenes via their Endogenous Phase" accepted for publication by the Journal of Infectious Diseases. It will appear in the September issue of the journal."

Dr. Ronald S. Tikofsky, Chairperson, Dept. of Psych., has been elected as a member of the National Academy of Neuropsychology.

Top 10 Grant Recipients Receive $1,737,353 in Awards

Dr. Ulysses Van Spiva, Assoc. Exec. V.P. announced a $1,261,099 or 30% increase in the total amount of grant proposals processed by the Division of Sponsored Research and Training in fiscal year '77-'78.

Additionally, 159 research and training proposals were processed which resulted in a 41% increase over the 113 proposals processed in each of the two previous years of operation.

The ten highest awardees of federal, state, local and private grants at FIU were:

Name	Unit	Total Received In Sponsored Research Funds
Paul Wood	Technology	590,402
Marvin Dunn	CHIC Center	466,555
Judy Ellis	Occupational Institute	200,000
John Kampsnider	Education	89,000
Penelope Easton	Public Affairs & Services	85,741
John Remington	Center for Labor Research & Studies	65,250
Mike Kobasky	Conferences & Short Courses	63,998
Carolann Baldyga	Off-Campus Credit Courses	63,672
Andy Banks	Center for Labor Research & Studies	57,533
Florence Amato	Public Affairs & Services	55,202
Total		$1,737,353

While encouraging faculty and staff members to utilize the Division of Sponsored Research and Training when becoming involved in proposal development and/or grantsmanship activities, Spiva said "The faculty and staff at FIU is largely responsible for the significant increase we have had in grant funding this past year. I encourage them to meet the same challenge next year."

Singing from the heart—school children participate in the first day of Hispanic Heritage Week festivities

WOW, Look What FIU Has to Offer Women!

Commissioner Ruth Shack, State Attorney Janet Reno, and the Fusion Dance Company highlight Women's Opportunities Week (WOW) festivities, November 13-17 at Florida International University's North Miami campus, located off N.E. 151st Street and Biscayne Boulevard.

For entertainment, there will be music, movies, dancing and films; speakers will discuss divorce, sex, rape, and birth control; and career opportunities in art, literature, law and media will be featured. There's even a section on men's liberation.

Sponsored by the Student Government Association, the following schedule of events is your key to finding out the who, what, when, and where of women today.

For more information, contact the Student Government office at 940-5805.

Sponsored by FIU and the Greater Miami Chapter Society of Professional Journalists, over 600 people from as far as Lake Worth and Key West attended the day long activities which featured seminars by well-known authorities in all phases of media.

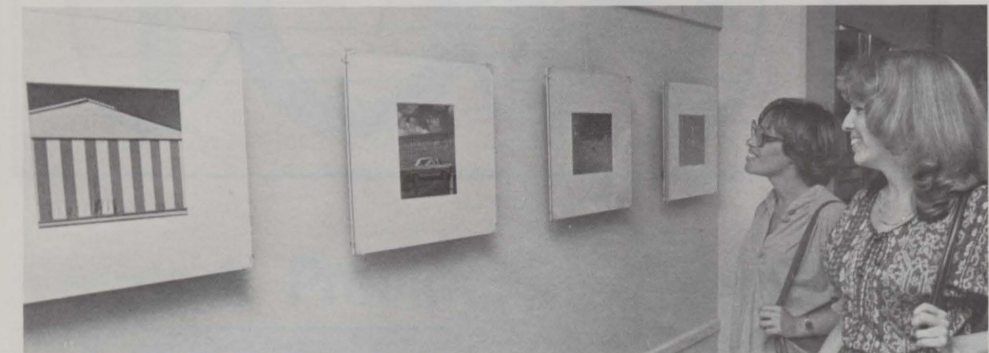

Chancellor Addresses Foundation Annual Meeting

Dr. E. T. York, Chancellor of the State University System of Florida will discuss the future of quality higher education in Florida at the Florida International University Foundation, Inc. Annual Meeting, Wednesday, October 18, at the Omni International Hotel.

Dr. J. Stephen Hudson, President of the Foundation, will highlight the year's activities, recognize those who have aided in achievements of the foundation, honor Tower Society members who have donated $20,000 or more to the foundation, and Charter Club members who contribute at least $500 annually in unrestricted funds.

The evening will begin at 7 pm with cocktails, followed by dinner at 8 pm. Tickets are $30 per person, and may be obtained in the University Relations and Development office, PC 230, Tamiami Campus.

Chairperson, Social Work Department and committee chairperson.

Eighty applications have been received—none of which have been reviewed—since the deadline has been extended until November 16th.

The School of Public Affairs and Services, created by a reorganization within FIU, contains the departments of Social Work, Criminal Justice, Health and Social Services Administration, and Public Administration.

This committee has also expressed a desire to encourage and establish positive relationships between the school and appropriate community agencies, and as a member of its committee Mr. Roger Carlton, executive assistant to Dade County Manager Meritt Stierheim.

Another committee is searching for a Dean of the School of Business and Organizational Sciences. Upon leaving the deanship, Dr. George B. Simmons will remain with FIU as a distinguished university professor of international business. FIU's School of Business is the only United States member of the Council of Latin American Deans of Schools and Administration (CLADEA).

Chaired by Duane Kujawa, marketing professor, the position has attracted 62 applications thus far, and has a November 30th extended deadline.

Qualifications include a DBA or Ph.D. in business, evidence of ability to support high quality teaching and research, a demonstrated commitment to internationalism, and indications of creative, efficient management of financial and human resources in program planning, development and coordination.

The committee for the Dean of Technology is in the process of being confirmed by Dr. Robert Fisher, Vice President for Academic Affairs.

Salaries for the deanship positions are $34,500, negotiable upwards.

students work at least part time, and have to choose their courses around their work schedule. This fact parallels a national trend of students taking longer to finish college and accumulating work experience (and capital!) along the route to a college degree.

Also affecting the number of hours taken are the per-credit tuition schedule now in effect instead of a flat fee-per-quarter system; the motivation of trying to get good grades in a few courses instead of limping through too many; and considerations of family responsibilities in addition to academic objectives.

Also instrumental in raising enrollment were faculty and academic departmental staffs, who put in extra time advising students on and before September 25. Faculty members also raised caps on course enrollment where possible, a result of executive vice president Joseph Olander explaining the urgency of maximizing student enrollment.

Olander had prepared a thorough analysis of the budget situation and the steps the university had to take to deal with this year's limited budget while trying to attract more students as a foundation for a healthier budget next year. Olander's visits with deans and faculty of individual departments, as well as university-wide administrators and staff, helped cement university morale and lent impetus to the drive to fill the community in on just what the university has to offer.

Since students tend to be the best free advertising for any school via the grapevine, this quarter's new students will hopefully bring their own network of friends and family to the university in upcoming quarters. Good reputations tend to grow geometrically, and the university is already counting on having its best year to date with renewed prospects for high enrollments and high spirits.

Wake Up, It's Later Than You Think

Latin musician Juan Candelas plays sacred drums to the tune of "Minority Interaction" at its first meeting in Miami's black community. Cultural similarities between blacks & Latins will be featured at each of the program meetings.

Blacks and Latins in Dade County are undergoing a "cultural polarization." Tensions are mounting due to a competitive job market and the need for bilingual employees, cultural differences and similarities existing between both groups, and the lack of information exchanged about political, economic, and social issues.

Something needs to be done, and something has been done—at the first meeting of the Minority Interaction Program designed by Dr. Ramon Mendoza, Professor of Modern Language at FIU, and co-sponsored by the Florida Endowment for the Humanities.

Amidst thunder and lightning synonymous to the seriousness of the meeting approximately 100 key black and Latin community members discussed primary causes of alienation among blacks and Latins in an effort to make "minority interaction, human interaction," and "unite two of the richest cultures in the world."

One of many contributors to the open discussion, Dr. Joseph Olander, Exec. V.P., metaphorically related the bad weather and the nature of the meeting to aliens in a science fiction story.

"Blacks and Latins are alienated in Dade County the same way I was alienated from the world in my car tonight as the thunder and lightning flashed," he said. "Latins are alienated primarily because of language barriers, and blacks are alienated primarily because of the color of their skin. Because of meetings like this, we can turn those flashes of lightning into flashes of good will, flashes of brilliance, and dedication. Then we can resolve one of the most significant issues facing the South Florida community."

Dr. Antonio Jorge, Assoc. Exec. V.P., then spoke of the need to begin "institutionalizing the program by selecting committees, and starting projects with target dates and deadlines." and Dr. Ulysses Van Spiva, Assoc. Exec. V.P., had visions of a "no frills card similar to American Express that would not require any more of me than it would of someone else. One that would allow blacks, Latins and all minorities an opportunity to enjoy equal access to what America has to offer."

Ms. Rudolph Murray, Director of the Inner City Education Foundation, emphasized how valuable time is, and told a parable of a woman with a clock she dearly loved that had broken and could not be fixed. Her son finally had it repaired and the pleased woman began to use it that night. At 12 am, the clock struck 12, ...then ...then 14. To her surprise, she nudged her husband and said, "wake up, it's later than it has ever been."

At the close of the meeting there was singing and dancing to the music of Juan Candelas, Afro/Cuban musician and sacred drum player and song interpretations rendered by Lydia Cabrera, noted author on Afro/Cuban religion.

The weekly meetings scheduled each Thursday at popular community centers both communities provide a mechanism for blacks and Latins talk to one another, discuss common problems, learn about both cultures, and explore avenues for cooperation. At the close of each discussion, there will be a presentation on various aspects of black and Latin cultural arts. Listed below are the dates, topics, and locations of the remaining meetings which are free and open to the public.

- October 19: Model City Center for the Cultural Arts. Demographic distribution and history of Black and Cuban immigration to the Greater Miami area.
- October 26: Little Havana Community Center. Prejudice and discrimination among Blacks and Cubans in Pre-Castro Cuba and in Miami.
- November 2: St. John's Baptist Church, Johnson Hall. Clannishness. Family structure. Values and standards of living.
- November 9: Little Havana Community Center. Education and skills. Housing problems.
- November 16: Model City Center for Cultural Arts. Employment. Business. Consumer behavior.
- November 23: Thanksgiving holiday. No session.
- November 30: Joseph Caleb Center. Community participation. Political action and organization. Government relations.
- December 7: Little Havana Community Center. Common problems of both minorities in the larger society. Possible avenues for cooperation.
- December 14: Joseph Caleb Center. Conclusions. Cultural presentation.

Marathon Clinics at FIU, Burdines

Four Marathon Super Clinics sponsored jointly by FIU's Physical Therapy Dept. and Burdines will be offered beginning Oct. 28 and continuing until just before the eve of the marathon Jan. 13.

On October 28, cardiologist John Cantwell will speak on the Tamiami campus in the Physical Therapy Department, AT 100. November 16 will bring cardiologist George Sheehan to the Burdines Dadeland Auditorium. Cantwell will outline a preparatory program for marathoners and discuss misconceptions about running or jogging and the effect they have on the heart. Sheehan will address himself to the prevention and treatment of muscular and skeletal injuries sustained most frequently during running.

Bill Rogers, one of the world's leading marathoners, will advise participants as to where they should be in their training one month prior to the actual event and what they should and should not be doing with only 30 days left. This, on Dec. 14 in Burdines Dadeland Auditorium.

Frank Shorter, the first American to win the Olympic Marathon (in Munich in 1972) since John Hayes in 1908, will detail race-day strategy and how to get through the 26-mile, 385-yard course on Jan. 11 at Burdines Dadeland Auditorium.

All the Super Clinics are free and open to the public. The Physical Therapy Dept. will hold open house in conjunction with the Oct. 28 clinic.

Non-Credit Fun

Belly dancing, yoga, dieting, weaving and more. It's all something you can learn and have fun while doing so in SGA's new mini courses that you take for leisure.

Available to all members of the University community for a nominal fee, you'll find a complete listing of courses in the University House Information Center, UH 102.

The Other Quarter is a series of non-credit short classes offered in the areas of sports, crafts, exercise, dance and other areas of special interest. Running for six to eight weeks, prices range from free to $15 each. Most are held one evening a week but some meet at lunchtime (up to three times a week).

Anyone who would like to add to the list of courses or has any ideas on the program should contact Shelley Stanczyk in the Student Activities Office, UH 211, or call ext. 2137.
